FRANCONIA'S CAPTAIN SENDS A WIRELESS REPORT TO BOSTON

The AMERICAN received today Captain David S. Miller's own story by wireless of how his liner, the Cunarder Franconia, rescued thirteen of the survivors from the burning Leyland liner Columbian.

Captain Miller's story, a marine classic for compressed description, speaks of the first sighting of the Columbian's small boat thus:

"The boat contained thirteen men and a corpse lying awash in the bottom of the boat. The survivors had used a trouser's leg from the corpse on the end of a boathook for a distress signal. The survivors were in a state of extreme exhaustion and mental collapse. Some had been burned by fire."

Shortly before Captain Miller's story was flashed to Boston wireless messages from Sable Island via Halifax said that the steamer Manhattan had picked up another of the Columbian's boats, containing Captain John H. MacDonald and thirteen of the crew.

FOUR DEAD, MANY MISSING.

That makes a total of twenty-seven known to be saved. The corpse picked up by the Franconia was that of Chief Steward Mathews. The Manhattan reports an engineer killed in an explosion on the Columbian and another man drowned. Captain Miller's own story reports the death of a lamp trimmer, who fell in the burning hold.

These make a total of four known dead.

The chief officer's boat, containing from nineteen to twenty-four men, is missing. That makes a total of fifty-two. But the Leyland office in New York thinks that the Columbian left Antwerp with sixty or seventy officers and crew. These discrepancies are yet to be adjusted.

Captain Miller's graphic story of his rescue of the first boat load of thirteen came pulsing through the air as follows:

SABLE ISLAND, S.S. FRANCONIA, May 6.

Cunard, Boston:

The following is the story of the rescue:

We received a wireless from the steamer Georgic at 11:24 a. m. on May 4 that the Seydlitz passed, in 41:27 north, 59:07 west, a large steamer burning all over the hull, high out of water, foremast and funnel gone and no people on board.

At that time I received a wireless from Sable Island requesting me to endeavor to identify the burning steamer should I pass close.

At 1:15 p. m. we received word from Boston that there was great alarm over the Seydlitz report that a big ocean liner was afire. Dispatch also said there had been rescues by the Franconia and asked for a brief dispatch.

At that time I replied: "Rumor of rescue not true."

On receipt of the Georgic's message, I changed my course to cross the position given of the burning steamer. We arrived there at 3 p. m.

We could discover no trace of the wreck, but we decided, owing to the false report that the Franconia had made rescues and fearing its influence on other possible rescuing steamers, to encircle the position in a six-mile radius.

At 3:20 p. m. I sighted a boat on my starboard bow. Being already prepared for a rescue, the occupants of this small boat were taken on board the Franconia in a few minutes.

A heavy swell was running at the time, so I took the precaution of putting out my sea boats to cover their embarkation.

The boat contained thirteen men and a corpse, lying awash in the bottom of the boat.

USE DEAD MAN'S CLOTHING FOR SIGNAL.

The survivors had used a trousers leg from the corpse on the end of a boathook for a distress signal.

The survivors were in a state of extreme exhaustion and mental collapse.

Some had been burned by fire.

They stated that they had been adrift forty hours. Six were put

Dealer Charges Trust Refused to Sell Him Sugar

A special agent of the Federal government has been appointed to investigate a charge that the American Sugar Refining Company refused to sell sugar to Lewis Brass, a small storekeeper in East Boston.

Brass brought the facts before Representative Thomas A. Niland Representative Niland said later:

"I went to the company, but could get no satisfaction out of them. They would give no reason for refusing to sell to Brass."

Niland then went to Assistant United States District Attorney Rogers, who put a special agent on the case.

Thousands Pray for Recovery of Madame Nordica

NEW YORK, May 6.—George W. Young, banker and husband of Mme. Lilian Nordica, has received a cable from Batavia, Java, to the effect that she showed slight improvement. Mr. Young today said: "I received a message saying: 'Condition worse. Extremely weak; still hope and pray.'

"When I read that message I had all but given up hope, but I know my wife's belief in the efficacy of prayer and I knew she had inspired the telegram.

"Whole congregations are offering up prayers for her safe recovery. They come from synagogues, from Roman Catholic churches, from denominational churches and from people in all walks of life.

"If her friends throughout the United States will continue to pray for her recovery I believe that she will come back safe in health."

Page Warns Writers of Their Careers

LONDON, May 6.—Ambassador Page, speaking at the dinner of the Royal Literary Fund, warned budding writers against their chosen precarious career: "From the view-point of ordinary prudence and mere barnyard gumption it is absurd for any man to set out to spend life writing. Gambling is more likely to yield a steady income," he said.

BECKER'S TRIAL IS OPENED

The first juror chosen to try Becker was F. Meredith Brogden, a bond salesman, who was sworn in as foreman. He is thirty-two years old and a bachelor.

The second juror selected was Wm. B. Dalton, an advertising man.

NEW YORK, May 6.—The second trial of ex-Police Lieutenant Charles Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal opened today with an attack by the defence upon District Attorney Whitman.

Bourke Cockran, counsel for Becker, moved before Justice Seabury that the district-attorney be adjudged in contempt of court. This motion was based upon the contention that the district attorney had made public statements prejudicial to the interests of the defendant. Mr. Cockran also made a motion for a change of venue on the ground that Becker could not get a fair trial in New York County.

Justice Seabury said he would listen to formal motions from the defence later and directed that the trial go on. Clerk Penny at once began calling the toll of 300 talesmen who jammed the courtroom.

COURT ROOM CROWDED.

The court room was crowded to its capacity when Clerk Penny called "Charles Becker to the bar."

Becker was neatly dressed and looked well groomed as he faced the court. There was no evidence of nervousness in his steady gaze.

Detectives employed by the district attorney's office swarmed through the big crowd that jostled to get into the courtroom. A special guard was also employed for the talesmen. District Attorney Charles S. Whitman appeared in person for the State.

Mrs. Becker, the loyal wife of the prisoner, who has worked without pause to free her husband from the murder charge, was among the first to enter the courtroom, and consulted eagerly with her husband's counsel.

WIDE INTEREST SHOWN.

The wide outside interest in the Becker case, with its revelations of police and underworld intrigue, was shown by the fact that telegraph wires had been strung into the corridor of the courthouse for use of newspaper men, some of whom came here especially to represent out-of-town newspapers. The physical preparations were all complete when the trial was called. At the clerk's desk sat William Penny, who has served at all the celebrated trials in this city during the past twenty-five years.

Acting under directions from Justice Seabury, Penny issued special instructions to newspaper men. Before the court opened it was announced at the office of the District Attorney that the prosecution was ready to go on and would combat any attempt of the defence to secure delay.

Becker was put on trial, the first time, on October 7, 1912, and found guilty seventeen days later. He was sentenced to die in the week beginning December 9, 1912, but this appeal acted as a stay. In February of this year the verdict was set aside and a new trial ordered.

REPORT SLAYING OF ROJAS AND HUERTA'S FAMILY IN FLIGHT

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Orders have gone from the War Department to General Funston, it was learned today, authorizing him to extend his lines about Vera Cruz as far as "in his judgement it is necessary."

This, it was explained, gives the American commander virtually a free hand in dealing with the situation at Vera Cruz, and it was said that the American lines would at once be extended and heavy fortifications thrown up.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Mexican Federal soldiers are concentrating about twenty miles west of Vera Cruz, have trained their field artillery upon the pumping station at Vera Cruz and are guarding railroad tracks leading to Vera Cruz.

VERA CRUZ, May 6.—Luis Manuel Rojas, second Vice-President of the Mexican Congress under Madero and thrown into jail by Huerta, was executed outside Santiago prison, Mexico City, last Saturday. This report is brought from Mexico City, but is not confirmed.

VERA CRUZ, May 6.—Evidence that Huerta is preparing to flee the country is strengthened by this report in Mexico City which appears in La Union today:

General Huerta's family left Mexico City Tuesday for Salina Cruz, a port on the southwest under the doctor's care in the hospital and the others were given brandy and soup and bathed in hot water and put to bed.

As they immediately fell asleep little information can be obtained from them.

The carpenter says that the ship was the Columbian, sailing from Antwerp, about 12,000 tons register.

He, the carpenter, was asleep, but heard the alarm of fire. He was coming along the deck and had arrived about midships when an explosion occurred under his feet, which blew him overboard. He was picked up by a boat.

The lamp trimmer's son states that his father was coming forward, calling for him, when the deck blew up and the father fell in the burning hold.

A quartermaster says that Captain MacDonald, chief engineer, chief officer and several others were getting a third boat out when a big explosion took place. He does not know whether the captain and others were saved.

The second officer got away with about twenty-four men ten minutes before the boat that we picked up got away.

FLAMES SWEEP OVER SHIP.

All agree that the fire started at midnight on Sunday, cause unknown.

It was first reported by the lookout, who saw smoke coming up from No. 4 hatch. Half an hour int the whole ship forward and amidships was in flames, with constant and violent explosions, which wrecked the wireless apparatus.

We are carrying to Boston the remains of the chief steward, who was frightfully injured by the explosion. He was delirious soon after the boat got away and died on Tuesday, at midday.

Our doctor certified that his death was due to shock and exposure after picking up the boat.

I made another detour, searching for the other boats, and deeply regret that I could not find them. But many other steamers are hastening to the scene of the disaster, and I trust that, if not already picked up, they will be rescued by steamers following.

I have sent marconigrams to all ships to look out for the two missing boats. I have received replies from the Manhattan, Haverford and Marengo.

ENGINEER AMONG THOSE KILLED BY EXPLOSION

Wireless dispatches from Halifax, N. S., today stated that Captain John H. MacDonald and thirteen members of the crew of the Leyland liner Columbian, which was burned at sea Sunday night, had been picked up by the steamer Manhattan.

The Manhattan also reports two deaths. An engineer was killed in one of the explosions on the Columbian. Another man was drowned.

Thirteen had already been picked up by the Cunard liner Franconia, making the total rescues twenty-seven.

The death and rescue table to date is as follows:

SAVED.

By Franconia	13
By Manhattan	14
Total	27

KNOWN DEAD.

Chief Steward Mathews (from exposure).

Lamptrimmer, fell in burning hold.

Engineer killed in explosion.

Man drowned while leaving the burning vessel.

MISSING.

Nineteen to twenty-four men in first officer's boat.

Halifax received the news of the Manhattan's rescue of fourteen men by wireless via Sable Island. This is the message of rescue that the Manhattan flashed over the sea:

"Manhattan picked up one boat of Columbian. Captain and thirteen others. One engineer killed in explosion and one man drowned leaving ship. Manhattan still searching for other boats."

The Manhattan made her rescue in 41.9 north latitude and that of 59.35 west longitude. She is bound from New York to Antwerp.

Thirteen survivors picked up by the Franconia are expected to arrive off Boston Light tonight.

The rescued sailors were forty hours in the crowded boat before being sighted by the Franconia. They suffered terribly, and as great was their exhaustion that they are unable yet to give a coherent story of the disaster.

One member of the crew, Chief Steward Mathews, died of exposure during the racking forty hours in the boat.

WIRELESS IS WRECKED.

Fire that broke out in the freight was followed by a series of explosions that rent the ship from stem to stern and opened a path for the rapid spread of flame. In less than a half hour the Columbian was belching flame her whole length. Captain McDonald gave the order to abandon the steamer while explosions still continued in the hold and when the heat became almost unbearable.

The captain took charge of one boat and Chief Steward Mathews, who perished, the other. The captain's boat was the last to leave the ship. The first boat stood by the blazing steamer, awaiting the second boat, but the dense smoke obscured the men's vision and no trace of it was seen. It is believed by many of the survivors that all occupants of the second boat went to their deaths by its capsizal.

The explosions put the wireless of the Columbian out of commission, time being available for sending out only a part of a frantic message for help.

The North German Lloyd steamship Seydlitz, which sighted the burning steamer and sent wireless calls for help, stood by until today without finding any trace of the missing boat.

The rescued aboard the Franconia are: James Drohan, wireless operator; Antone Ehak, carpenter; Tver Iverson, boatswain's mate; Ungus Prinz, Jens Jensen, A. Abelnick, quartermaster; Gustav Schriborn, donkey man; Thomas Connor, Jurt Lel and Arthur Brantik, able seamen; Antony Cordones and Bennet Rother, firemen, and Frank Wedekind, messroom steward.

With their vessel belching flames and wrecked by the intermittent explosions, the crew found themselves helpless. Safety lay only in abandoning the steamer, and this the captain ordered.

TELLS OF RESCUE.

Of their sufferings during the forty hours in which they were tossed about, and of the death of Chief Steward Matthews during this time, the men could say little when they were brought on to the decks of the Franconia.

When Captain David S. Miller of the Franconia sighted the little band in the lifeboat the great engines of the Cunarder were slowed down and the boat came to a stop.

The men in the boat were far too weak to help themselves and one of the Franconia's boats went over the side, manned by sailors who rowed desperately toward the little craft. The hundreds of passengers on the Franconia lined the rail to take in every detail of the spectacular event.

Tackles were swung outboard and made fast to the lifeboat and it was raised to the deck, where the men, more dead than alive, were carried to cabins. Sympathetic passengers crowded around with offers of aid, none of which was necessary.

In gasps, piecemeal, the starving, exhausted men managed to reveal their identity and something of what happened to their boat.

The Columbian, they said, caught fire at a time when many of them were below and asleep. Scarcely had they reached the deck when the first of a series of explosions occurred.

The departure from the burning ship, together with the extent to which the flames had spread, made it out of the question to take either food or water in the lifeboats. For hours the men did not feel the need, but as the exposure continued they began to suffer intensely.

ALIENATION SUIT STIRS UP BROOKLINE

Miss Elizabeth Cormerais, tango teacher of Brookline, and her mother today refused to discuss the alienation suits brought against them by Mrs. Arnetta R. Googins of Winthrop Centre, who is suing her husband, Stanley T. Googins, a prominent member of the Cottage Park Yacht Club, for divorce.

Mrs. Googins sues the two Brookline women for $10,000, alleging that they kept her husband from her and deprived her of his support. Both the divorce and alienation actions have stirred up a storm of gossip not only in Winthrop and Brookline, but among the exclusive folk of Newton, Wellesley and Auburndale, who were among the patrons of the beautiful tango teacher.

Mrs. Googins declared that she based her suits on evidence she alleges she collected with the assistance of detectives and her lawyer. Once, according to her story, she watched the Cormerais home in Brookline and saw her husband leave the house.

HUB TOO SEDATE FOR RUNAWAY GIRL EDITOR

Hazel Mudgett, the fifteen-year-old editor-in-chief of "Prince Prints," the Prince School paper which led to Governor Walsh's visit to the school three weeks ago, was brought back to her Back Bay home by an uncle today after her runaway trip which landed her in Concord, N. H.

"I detested the aristocratic and sedate people I found in Boston," she told the police in explaining her flight. "Boston folks are always shocked when anybody does an unconventional thing. So I couldn't stand them and their opinions and just ran away."

The girl was located through a story of her disappearance published in the AMERICAN. She had some exciting experiences and was to have gone to work in Concord this morning as a maid-of-all-work.

HATES TO RETURN.

"I dread returning to Boston," she said. "I'm afraid the teachers and pupils at the Prince School will be annoying. Probably they'll remove me from my position as editor-in-chief. I am proud of my job, because 'Prince Prints' is the only grammar school paper printed in America."

Mabel looks older than her fifteen years and is accounted the brightest girl in the school. She surprised the police by her conversational powers.

"I was born in Texas and lived ten years in Chicago," she said. "I liked Chicago, but there they don't care what you do. People who have always lived in Boston seem perfectly satisfied with the city. I've only lived there ten years, but I don't believe I can ever grow accustomed to the Boston ways.

STARTED OFF WITH $2.

"So I determined to leave. I had saved up $2. Last Wednesday I took my suit case and went down to the North station. I'd like to go as far as I can on $2." I told the ticket seller. He sold me a ticket to Contocook, N. H.

"I got off the train at Contocook and roamed around. Finally I found a boarding house keeper, who was very kind. I told her I wanted to work on a farm. She advised me to go to Concord.

"After trying for two days to find a job, I went to Concord. There I tried to get work in the factories. I failed. I read the papers and finally ran across an 'ad.' A woman wanted a maid-of-all-work. She had already hired a maid when I called. But she said she had a daughter-in-law who wanted a maid. The daughter-in-law hired me and I was to have gone to work today."

AUTO KNOCKS DOWN 3 WOMEN

Three women were knocked down during the noon hour today by an automobile as they were crossing Park street at Beacon. One of the three was seriously hurt and was hurried to the Haymarket Square Relief station in an ambulance. The other two were treated in nearby stores.

Thomas Bowen of Roxbury, driver of the machine, was taken by the police to the hospital to learn how serious was the condition of the woman taken there.

At the time of the accident Beacon street was crowded. The auto came up the hill going east. Suddenly it veered sharply into Park street, running up against the curb. One of the front wheels went on the sidewalk. A dozen men and women fled from the streets. One of the three women hurt, all of whom screamed, was knocked several feet.

Bowen seemed unable to explain the accident.

GOLD, NEWSBOY CRIPPLE, DEAD FROM BULLET

Lewis Gold, the newsboy cripple who was shot Saturday night at the Haymarket street station of the subway, by Maria Germina, died at 12.10 o'clock this afternoon at the City Hospital.

The bullet from the woman's revolver lodged in Gold's neck. Up to today there had been hope that he would recover. He began to fail early today and his mother, brothers and sisters were at his bedside when he died.

The woman who did the shoting is now in the Charles street jail in default of $5,200 bail and will be arraigned tomorrow morning charged with manslaughter. She was firing at one of two unknown men and one of the bullets struck the newsboy who was selling papers at the subway entrance.

Gold, who had only one leg, was a famous Boston newsboy, and knew former President Taft. He came to Boston nineteen years ago from Russia. He lived on Lucerne street, Dorchester.

DURYEA, SLAYER OF MILLIONAIRE FATHER, RAVES IN PADDED CELL

NEW YORK, May 6.—Chester Burnell Duryea, slayer of his millionaire father, General Hiram Duryea, raved and fought in his padded cell in the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital today and became so violent that he had to be strapped to his cot to prevent him from committing suicide.

About the same time a hearse was bearing his father's body to its last resting place with an escort of Civil War veterans. At the hospital the son, who is the divorced husband of Nina Larre Smith, daughter of Frank Hn Waldo Smith of Boston, moaned repeatedly:

"If father were here he would understand why I did it. He knew that George Washington commanded me to kill him."

UNDER CLOSE GUARD.

A guard was constantly in attendance and two alienists are keeping Duryea under surveillance. It is expected he will be consigned to the Matteawan asylum for the criminal insane.

Former District Attorney Robert H. Elder of Kings County, who was retained by relatives to act in Duryea's behalf, said he had not decided whether to ask for a lunacy commission or have his client's sanity established before a jury. Before he was strapped down Duryea tried to butt his brains out against the wall.

"I got a message to do it," Duryea shouted another time.

"What kind of a message?" he was asked.

"I'm justified; you'll find that I'm justified," was his only reply. "You'll find I'm one of these second sons."

What he meant the police have been unable to determine.

At Duryea had expressed surprise when told his father was dead.

LARGEST BENEFICIARY.

Friends of the family said that Duryea was undoubtedly a large, if not the largest, beneficiary under the will of his father. The estate was estimated at upward of $2,000,000.

Robert B. Honeyman, the family lawyer for many years, would say nothing concerning this phase of the situation save that an estimate was too large.

There are three children—Harry D. Duryea, a stock broker; Mrs. Ellery Anderson, who is abroad, and Chester —but of the three the father was brought in closest contact with Chester. In everything, friends said, the young man turned to his father for counsel.

Besides being a crack revolver shot, Chester Duryea, as a search of his rooms yesterday disclosed, kept a score of small arms and rifles handy. Louis Duryea said Chester had been in several sanitariums. He had shown signs of irrationality since his wife secured a separation in 1902. Mrs. Duryea is said to be in Paris. She is independently wealthy.

CARNEGIE SENDS MISS WILSON A CHEST OF SILVER

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Andrew Carnegie has sent a chest of silver to Eleanor Wilson, who tomorrow becomes the bride of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo.

A gold bracelet, studded with diamonds, is expected to be the gift of the United States Senate to Miss Wilson.

Miss Wilson's trousseau is most beautiful. A dinner frock of pink satin with silver lace is particularly admired, and there is an afternoon gown of white Celaap crepe, together with a Wanzan blue taffeta and tulle of exceptional beauty.

A dancing frock of sky blue watered taffeta, with net drapery and the butterfly effect in the back, is another gown in the trousseau which will cause sighs of admiration. The going away dress is a three-piece affair of Copenhagen cordova cloth, blue, in an unusual shade, due, it is expected, to become extremely popular.

For steamer wear or motoring there is an army cape of cadet blue, which hangs long and full from the shoulders and has a wide rolling collar, which presents a novel effect.

The full trousseau comprises nine hats and fifteen new gowns, and it is reported that the rare and beautiful lace on the wedding gown is a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, who purchased it in Europe during their honeymoon.

The ceremony will be performed in the Blue Room of the White House at 6 o'clock in the afternoon by the Rev. Sylvanus Beach, pastor of the Connecticut Presbyterian Church. The ushers will be the President's military and naval staff, who will wear full dress uniforms. Miss Eleanor Wilson will be attended by her sister Margaret as maid of honor, and Dr. Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., naval aide and physician to the President, will act as best man.

The guests will number between fifty and sixty, including relatives. No card invitations have been issued. The wedding will be followed by a supper of fifty covers in the State dining room, during which the Marine Band will play. After the bride and bridegroom have departed there will be dancing in the East Room.

Several handsome presents have been given to the bride by Secretary McAdoo, one a string of pearls which she will wear with her wedding gown, which is of ivory satin. The engagement ring was a single diamond set between sapphires. Mr. McAdoo made a present of a gold wrist watch incrusted with rose cut diamonds, and shortly after the betrothal he made a gift of a superb fire opal set in a circlet of diamonds.

FALLIS, JAILED FOR DEBT, GOES FREE AT LAST

Arthur W. Fallis, the young man who has served over eight weeks in jail for a debt that was originally less than $25, was today freed by Judge Wentworth in the Somerville court.

Fallis was given the poor debtors' oath and left the court with his attorney, Clarence W. Rowley.

His mother for eight weeks has helplessly wondered how she could free her boy from jail. At last she went to E. Gerry Brown, supervisor of small loans. He asked Mr. Rowley to take up the matter.

Fallis lived at No. 762 Broadway, West Somerville. Six years ago he borrowed a sum of money from Joseph Libby of No. 209 Washington street. He says it was $15. Libby says the amount was $25. At any rate, the judgment against Fallis was for something over $100.

Fallis swore in court today that he was penniless.

Urges New Hospitals for "White Plague"

"There are about 10,000 persons under treatment for tuberculosis in Massachusetts," declares Dr. P. C. Bartlett, former superintendent of the Rutland State Sanatorium, in the current issue of the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal. "Besides, there are many thousands more of people in this State with non active tubercular foci. There is a large number of cases that need hospital care, for which we have no provision. When such hospitals are provided one of our present problems will disappear."

MacKnight of New York city has been selected to write the class ode. Miss E. Hazel Macy of West Somerville and Mr. Carl A. Garabedian were chosen to write the music for the ode. James E. Kindred of Dorchester will be the class poet.

Addley of Detroit has just had a pint of blood drained from him, frozen for twenty-four hours, skimmed of germs, then heated to its normal temperature and injected into his spinal canal. Jamaica Plain Girl Wires She Is Bride

The news of the marriage of Miss Beatrice Wheeler, nineteen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Harvey Wheeler of Jamaica Plain, and Charles O'Connor, a salesman in Mr. Wheeler's employ, became known when the bride wired her parents that they were married a week ago. The ceremony was performed at the rectory of the Holy Cross Cathedral.

GIRLS FIND HOW TO MAKE HOME ON $25 A WEEK

Girls at the Practical Arts High School are studying how to make a home on $25 a week, which is $1,200 annual income.

Miss Eleanore Marble, a member of the senior class, solves the problem in this way:

Savings bank	$5.00
Insurance	5.00
Rent	25.00
Groceries	11.25
Meat and fish	11.25
Milk	2.75
Clothing	11.25
Heat and light	5.00
Laundry and supplies	2.50
Help	4.00
Recipes and receipeting	.50
Ice (at table in 4 winter month for the summer)	.25
Necessary carfares (the house has been selected in the country)	2.50
Recreation	3.00
Amusement	3.00
Literature	.50
Church and charity	.50
Remembrances	.75
Life insurance	.50
Total	$90.25
Amount saved toward next month	$15.75

Each of these items Miss Marble studied with care. She estimated the cost of her own clothes at present, and those of a young man who is soon married. She calculated how long each article would last, and averaged the cost of it for one year. In finding a house, sunshine, sanitation, and the neighborhood were considered. She even took a compass to the house she visited to see how the sun came in during the day. The domestic science course helped her in planning her food; about thirty cents is supposed to feed an adult for a day. She calculated next, how much would be necessary for running expenses, and then how much should be given to "higher life."

Now she is studying house furnishing, to ascertain how much money her husband should have put into the bank, and how much she should have, before they marry. She visits china stores, hardware shops and furniture stores to find how much furnishing is essential and how much it would cost, in a good quality. Her aim is so to furnish the house that the first pieces bought would always be good enough to keep, and there would be no waste.

HERO'S BURIAL FOR HAGGERTY NEXT WEEK; FUNERAL SHIP ON WAY

Corporal Daniel Haggerty, the United States marine who was the first killed in the capture of Vera Cruz, is to be given a hero's burial in Cambridge, on May 14 or 15.

The date will depend upon the arrival at the Charlestown Navy Yard of the cruiser Montana, which is conveying the American dead from Mexico.

Congressman Deitrick wired today from Washington to Mayor Good of Cambridge, and to the Haggerty home, that the Montana will make a special trip to Boston with Haggerty's body and those of Walter Maxon of Orleans and Rufus E. Percy of Concord, N. H., after leaving the other thirteen bodies at the Brooklyn yard. The telegram added that the Montana was due at Charlestown next Tuesday evening, May 12.

Commandant De Witt Coffman had been instructed by Secretary of the Navy Daniels to receive the remains with fitting ceremony at the local yard and to co-operate with the New England authorities in the transfer and burial.

Mayor Good said today that while details would depend largely on the Montana's arrival, the plan was to have former Alderman Jeremiah Corkery receive Haggerty's body from the naval authorities on behalf of the city of Cambridge.

The remains, in a flag-draped casket, will be given a military escort from the Charlestown Navy Yard to the Haggerty home, No. 16 Harding street, Cambridge, on Tuesday night, if the cruiser docks in time, or early Wednesday morning. The family will have the body the first day. On the second it is planned to have it lie in state in the Cambridge armory on Massachusetts avenue.

DAYS OF GRIEF FOR CITY.

The following day the big public funeral will be held. It will be a military demonstration, anticipated in by State and city officials, by the army and navy, by the G. A. R. and Spanish War veterans and by patriotic and fraternal organizations. With a naval band from the Charlestown yard and generous delegations, the funeral cortege will be long and impressive.

Mayor Timothy Good, who conceived the idea of a public funeral, has requested that all flags be half-masted and that public buildings and business places be closed during the ceremonies. City Hall will be draped with mourning, as will the armory and other buildings.

It will be a day of grief and patriotic fervor in Cambridge. The citizens across the Charles and those of Greater Boston and New England are glad to pay homage to Haggerty.

Corporal "Dan," robust, quiet and brave, with eight years of creditable service in the Marine Corps behind him, was unknown until he gave his life in defence of his country and his flag.

But now his name and those of the other heroes of Vera Cruz who died in the opening skirmish, are household words, and their deaths are lamented the country over.

Two score of Haggerty's shipmates on the Utah have died from wounds inflicted by "snipers" on the landing day, making the American toll nineteen dead, with forty-five still in the sick bay.

The City of Cambridge, prompt to recognize the valor of her sons in the Civil and Spanish wars, is just as eager to eulogize and show reverence to those who fall in Mexico.

That is why Corporal Haggerty is to be given such an elaborate funeral.

CITY FINDS LESSON.

With the pride that Cambridge as a city feels over the sacrifice made by Haggerty is found a well-defined determination to make a civic lesson of his death and courage. The City Fathers wish to perpetuate Corporal "Dan's" bravery by a memorial of a material nature which will serve as an inspiration to coming generations.

It is just such bravery and sacrifice as Daniel Haggerty showed that gives national inspiration; just such heroism as he and his mates displayed South of the Rio Grande, and thousands of men before them in the country's hours of peril that nourishes and gives expression to patriotism.

Realizing this, Mayor Good and the members of the City Government donated the finest lot in the Cambridge Cemetery as a last resting place for Corporal Haggerty. It is planned to erect a monument at the young marine's grave with a tablet fittingly inscribed.

A life-size oil painting is also talked of, to be hung in a place of honor in City Hall.

The AMERICAN has been requested by readers to start a subscription for a suitable memorial for Haggerty, in view of the interest shown by readers the AMERICAN will gladly receive contributions and help the Cambridge authorities in any and every way possible.

The sentiment of AMERICAN readers is shown in the following letter to the writer of which started the Haggerty monument fund with a contribution of $2:

EDITOR AMERICAN,

I have been very much impressed by the preparations made by the Cambridge authorities and army and navy representatives for the funeral of Corporal Daniel A. Haggerty, the brave young marine who gave his life for the country at Vera Cruz. I admired also the interest shown by the Navy Department.

Too much glory cannot be paid to those heroic fellows who gave their lives in the flush of their youth. Demonstrations like that planned for the Haggerty funerals inspire patriotism. They set an example to our boys. They show that the country and its citizens are quick to reward patriotic effort and sacrifice.

Therefore, let us erect a monument over the grave of Corporal Haggerty in the Cambridge Cemetery to make his death a lasting lesson. Kindly accept my contribution of $2 to aid in the cause. Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR W. SAMPSON, Roxbury.

If others care to contribute they may direct offerings to "Editor Haggerty Fund," Boston AMERICAN, Boston, Mass.

Commandant Coffman will select a naval officer as chief marshal of the parade. He will also assign bodybearers. Twenty-five members of the Army and Navy Union will escort the body of Haggerty from the Charlestown yard to his home. Trimountain garrison will also furnish the body guard, which will watch the bier in squads while the remains are lying in state in the armory.

The funeral procession will march to St. Patrick's Church and the field through the esplanade to Wadsworth street, Kenilworth square, Third street and Berkshire. In the march to the cemetery it will pass through York and Columbia streets to Lafayette square, Massachusetts avenue to Harvard square, to Gardner street, past the Washington Elm, Brattle street, Elmwood avenue, and Coolidge avenue to the cemetery.

B. & M. Clash Is Down to Runs and Hours

The dispute now centres on the runs and hour schedule.

Dr. H. W. Nowell, professor of pathology in the school of medicine of Boston University, who has discovered a treatment for cancer, lecturing at Evans Memorial, advised cleanliness above all things. "Experience shows there is practically no likelihood of one human being directly transmitting the disease to another."

TWINS FIRST ON STREET TO HANG OUT OLD GLORY

Twins are doubly patriotic, of course, so Walter and Warren Smith of Willow avenue, Somerville, were the first to fly Old Glory on their street.

The twins write to the AMERICAN'S Flag Editor:

"We are twin brothers, seven years old, and have our flag flying from the piazza, the first one on Willow avenue."

The "Up with the Flag" movement is spreading. Old Glory is being raised more and more homes, club buildings, stores and other structures daily.

While the soldier and sailor boys are fighting in Mexico for the Flag of Flags, the least we at home can do is to unfurl the Stars and Stripes. Letters to the Flag Editor tell the popular feeling, as follows:

ALBERT L. KENNEDY, No. 95 Bartlett street, Charlestown: "I have raised the flag. I had two uncles killed in the Civil War. Had a brother-in-law in the Spanish War, and have an uncle in the navy now who has seen forty years' service. Also have a cousin in Mexico in the navy. My father is in the Ninth Regiment, V. A. M. V. M."

BEATRICE MEDICO, Everett: "I have put out my flag. It is the only flag now flying on our street. It will stay out until the Mexican trouble is over. God bless the Stars and Stripes."

GEORGE C. WAUGH, No. 19 Winslow street, Hyde Park: "I am six years old and have my flag out of our window in honor of our nation and of my great-uncle, who fought in the Civil War, and my uncle in the Spanish War. I also would love to be a soldier."

JAMES GORDON BREWER, No. 34 Worcester square, Boston: "I am only a boy of thirteen, but a true American. I put two flags out of my window this morning at sunrise. They will stay there until the war is over. I tried to enlist to fight for my country, but guess that I am too young yet."

JEAN STEEVES, No. 29 Linden street, Everett: "I raised my flag at 7:40 in the morning. I wish I was old enough to go and help nurse the wounded soldiers, but cannot go as I am only twelve. I hope there will be peace soon. I love our flag and would give my life for it. May God bless our flag and our land."

MORSE DUMMY PAID MILLIONS TO NEW HAVEN

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Grover Cleveland Richards, a twenty-six-year-old contractor of Portland, Me., whom Governor Folk, chief counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission, calls "a millionaire for a minute," today testified at the commission's inquiry into financial dealings of the New Haven system, that he acted as dummy treasurer and dummy director of the Metropolitan Steamship Company, a New Haven subsidiary. In that capacity Richards testified he paid out about $3,000,000 over his own signature, not knowing where the money came from or whither it went.

"In all your dealings with the Metropolitan Steamship Company you were merely a dummy?" asked Governor Folk.

"That's it, exactly," replied Richards, smiling broadly.

Richards testified that he signed two checks, one for $1,450,000 and the other for $1,550,000, acting as treasurer for the steamship company. This was done in the lobby of the Manhattan Bank of New York in the company of Warren E. Chase, a Hartford attorney, and two or three other persons, whose names Richards did not remember today. He said one of the men walked with him to the teller's window and supervised the depositing of the checks. He disclaimed any knowledge of any deposits made to meet the checks.

Mr. Richards, who is slight in stature and well dressed, declared that he was paid "about four or five dollars a day for the two weeks he acted as dummy treasurer of the New Haven subsidiary in addition to his expenses. He was retained as treasurer and also as a director in the company at Portland. He testified that he happened to be in the office of Frederick W. Hinckley, his brother-in-law, when the Metropolitan Company was in process of formation, and so was included in the list of directors and was elected treasurer.

'Big Tim's' Personal Estate Is $970,257

NEW YORK, May 6.—A tentative inventory of the estate left by "Big Tim" Sullivan, filed by the executors, shows that there is a personal estate of $970,257. The inventory was filed after several weeks' delay, alleged to have been caused by the difficulty of estimating the value of "Big Tim's" interest in the Sullivan-Considine theatrical circuit, which was sold to Marcus Loew a short time ago. The value of Sullivan's interest is set down at $500,000.

OLNEY REGRETS INABILITY TO ACCEPT OFFER

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Richard Olney of Boston in a letter to President Wilson received at the White House today declined the offer of the governorship of the Federal Reserve Board, on account of the press of private business. Mr. Olney's letter read:

My dear Mr. President:

I feel honored quite beyond words by your letter of the thirtieth ultimo, by the important office offered and by the friendly expressions of confidence which accompanied the offer.

But the act of Congress which very properly requires each member of the Federal Reserve Board to give his entire time to his work is an insurmable obstacle to my acceptance of the office. In the course of a long life I have, in various instances, assumed the duties and undertaken trusts which from their personal nature cannot properly be devolved upon others.

If the conclusion I have come to is a disappointment to you, I greatly regret it. But you can hardly be sorrier than I am that I am able to do so little in aid of an administration whose first year of achievements makes it one of the most notable the country has ever known.

Trusting you will not suffer your health or strength to be impaired by the strain of the unusual difficulties now attending the duties of your great office, I am,

Sincerely yours,
RICHARD OLNEY.

BIG COUNCIL BILL DUE FOR AXE IN THE SENATE TODAY

According to such gossip as was busy night floating about Legislative hotels in down-town Boston, the bonehe Senate is about to flip flop again on the question of a Boston City Council of seventeen members, elected from twelve districts.

One was told last night, in many quarters and with much assurance, that the Charter Guards will win the third and last round of the fight, and that the Larger Council bill will be put to death late this afternoon, when the question comes up in the Senate, so be "shall this bill pass to be engrossed?"

To get down to cases, one was told that Senator Hugh H. O'Rourke of Worcester, Democrat, and Senator James R. Tetler of Lawrence, Republican, both of whom are already TWICE on record as IN FAVOR of the Larger Council bill, are prepared to jump today to the John A. Sullivan-Good Government Association-James M. Curley side of the argument and help to kill the bill.

Hence the lines of care, visible early today, on the unemotional countenance of the Honorable James P. Timilty.

Senator Jim makes no attempt whatever to conceal his feeling that the battle is nearly, if not quite, lost.

Senator O'Rourke is frank about it. Jump? Sure!

"If I make up my mind for one minute," says Hurley, "that anybody is trying to put something over on Jim Curley, trying to put the Mayor in bad, and put his administration on the toboggan, I shall certainly change my position on the Larger Council bill and help to kill it. Some people are telling me that there is something much like a conspiracy to wreck the Curley administration. If that be true, Jim has only to say the word and he can have my vote at any moment."

Which would appear to fix Mr. O'Rourke's position quite definitely; what?

As for "Jimmy" Tetler, there is, as yet, nothing more substantial than corridor gossip to indicate that he, too, is not in the Larger Council bill.

Former Representative Francis L. Daly, representing the Mayor, was a visitor yesterday at the State House. At about the same time there also appeared there the Democratic leader of Lawrence, Public Works Commissioner Paul Hannagan, lately invited by Mayor Curley to take charge of the pressing duty of pushing Boston's miserable highways in something approximating the excellent condition of Essex street.

Paul Hannagan is not entirely unknown to, and not quite without influence with, the Honorable James R. Tetler—if you get the thought.

There was quite a lot of the "conspiracy" chatter about the State House. Some said the father of the "anti-Curley conspiracy" suggestion is the Honorable James A. Sullivan.

Merely in the way of reporting the daily chatter of Beacon Hill it is recorded here that the impression grows at the State House that the present Mayor of this town is the said Mr. Sullivan.

Representative John L. Donovan of Ward 16, a rough person at times but witty withal, and not without influence in the lower branch, put this impression into words, while the House was discussing the Two Platoon bill affecting the Boston Fire Department.

What is the bill asked John L. There appears to be an impression abroad that it plays only the fiddle in Boston. This isn't true, Mr. Speaker. It provides that the police and fire departments shall be under the control of the Boston Finance Commission. Mr. Speaker, THIS GOVERNMENTAL CHANGE should not be made [illegible] It provides that the fire and police departments shall be divided into two bodies or platoons, which shall be designated as A platoon and B platoon, and that said day force and night forces shall alternate in tours of duty every fourth day.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when James M. Curley was a member of this House in 1909 and 1910 he was enthusiastically in favor of such legislation for the firemen as is contemplated in this measure.

More recently still, Mr. Speaker, James M. Curley went up to Fore River in Quincy to call upon the firemen there, the strongest and their toughest, if he was elected Mayor.

The Mr. Curley we heard upon the stump, Mr. Speaker, seems to have been the Mr. Jekyll of this particular personality and the man in office Mr. Hyde.

We elected James M. Curley Mayor of Boston because John Jekyll never could have been elected. Already they have cast such a speck upon Massachusetts Civil Service Commission that the present City Hall administration could name Jack Judge Vigoda Murray to even Captain Kidd to office in the city of Boston and get away with it. Colonel Bernard O. K. on the nomination.

The House passed the Fireman's Two Platoon bill 131 to 104 and sent it across the building to the Senate. Mr. Curley's friends over there tell the AMERICAN that it doesn't stand even the ghost of a show.

Which is respectfully referred to the Legislative representatives of the firemen.

In the House, the speakers for the firemen included Peter Tague of Charlestown, Tom Wilson of Lynn, John J. Lydon of South Boston, John L. Donovan and former Mayor Beck of Chelsea.

"It isn't natural," Peter Tague said, "for a man to stand all his life caged up like a horse." Mr. Tague criticised the Chamber of Commerce opposition. "No other organization in the State," he said, "seeks for so much legislation and does so little work. If I am compelled to choose between cost and humanity, I shall take humanity, every time."

Opposition to the two platoons was voiced by Representative Kennard of Somerville, Chamberlain of Springfield, William H. Hickey of Ward 15, Channing H. Cox of Ward 10 and John J. Reilly of Ward 17. Said Mr. Fox:

This is not a fight between the Mayor of Boston and the Fire Department of the City of Boston, but between the voters of the Commonwealth and the members of the Legislature. If the proponents of this measure are sincere, if they really want a two-platoon system, why not make it general? Why not have it apply to ALL the cities of Massachusetts? The firemen of Boston already have one day off in five. They are getting two weeks' vacation every year. Their incomes exceed that of the average attorney.

Every citizen should take notice of the fact that the Committee on Ways and Means has reported tonight not to pass" on the McMorrow bill providing for the abolishment of party enrollment. It is greatly to the credit of Representative McGrath of Boston, Carbary of Milford, Reid of Pittsfield and J. J. Murphy of Boston that they are recorded as dissenting from this unfavorable report. The McMorrow bill permits the citizen to vote in primary elections (or canvases) without disclosing his party allegiance. He gets one ballot with all the parties on it. So long as he sticks to a single column, it is nobody's business which column that may be. Watch this bill!

For Congress, from the Eleventh Massachusetts District, the Honorable Grafton Dulany Cushing, Republican Speaker of the House of Representatives.

There is nothing official about this announcement; it isn't even an "announcement." It may be set down as rumor, gossip, "paper talk"—what you will. It was brought to the State House today by a gentleman from the Eleventh, who appeared to be excited about it.

The Republican machine having decided that the Honorable Samuel Walker McCall is the right sort of Republican to bring the Progressives into camp, it is only natural for Republican gossips to be "taking care" of the political future of Grafton. Hence this suggestion that Mr. Cushing is of Congressional size and might be likely to hold the Peters District against any Democrat living except the Honorable Andrew J.

The Speaker is in his fiftieth year. He looks at least ten years younger than that. He received his early education at Noble's school in the Back Bay, was graduated from Harvard College in '84 and the Harvard Law school in '88, and then, for some years, was an instructor at Groton.

The Senate has now passed to be engrossed a bill providing that members of the Public Service Commission must give ALL their time to the duties of the office.

The purpose of this bill is to drive Public Service Commissioner George W. Anderson, able, distinguished and much-in-demand attorney, out of the public service.

Senatorial "excuse" for the measure is that Governor Walsh is on record as demanding that public officials must have no outside business.

But the Governor said ALL public boards and commissions, and the Senate—to get rid of Anderson for the public service—corporations—has picked out ONE.

Also, the Governor urged reducing the number of commissioners from five to three.

On which point this bill is mum.

Governor Walsh, nevertheless, has said that he will sign the bill if it comes to him.

Honest men in the House of Representatives will do well to recognize this measure for exactly what it is: A Bill to Drive George W. Anderson Out of the Public Service.

Massachusetts needs a man of the Anderson stamp on the Public Service Board. Anderson has shown courage, independence, fearlessness, knowledge and great ability.

He probably cannot afford to close his law office and abandon his clients, and it is rank folly to demand that such a man be present at every grade crossing and train service hearing scheduled before the commission.

TEACHER WIDOW DENIES SHE IS TO WED STUDENT

Mrs. Grace Stanwood Ayer, widow of the late public librarian of Cambridge, Clarence W. Ayer, and a teacher at the Lawrence Academy at Groton, today denied she is to marry Jacintho C. Bothwell, a student at the academy, although an announcement to that effect is filed among the wedding intentions at Cambridge.

"I cannot think what possessed Mr. Bothwell to do such a thing," said Mrs. Ayer. "It was probably done as a lark. I'm sure I wasn't consulted—and I think I should have been at least.

"I'm not going to be married and maybe—maybe—never shall be. Anyway, the whole thing is quite out of the question, and Mr. Bothwell hasn't taken out a marriage license at all, even if he has filed intentions. You know it takes two to make that bargain."

Mrs. Ayer is twenty-four and has her two children with her at Groton Bothwell is twenty-one. The filing of the intentions and the subsequent denial of the engagement by Mrs. Ayer has puzzled the friends of the young woman in Cambridge and Groton and Bothwell refuses to discuss the matter. The following is a copy of the announcement on file in Cambridge:

"Jacintho C. Bothwell, 21, student, No. 8 Kingsdale, street, Boston, and Grace Stanwood Ayer, widowed, 24, teacher, No 17 Gray street."

Neither Mrs. Ayer nor Bothwell live at the addresses mentioned, but both are well known at those places

Thousands of Pairs of Good, Clean Shoes Still Remain to be Sold from

SHEINWALD'S

of the Enormous Shoe Stock which was salvaged from the $150,000 FIRE THAT OCCURRED APRIL 3rd IN THE SOUTH BOSTON HEADQUARTERS OF INTERSTATE SHOE CO., 348-358 Congress St.

The Prices Will Be Positively Less Than ½ Actual Cost of Making

I want to explain that the Interstate Shoe Co. is the local New England headquarters of the largest shoe firm in the world. The organization with which they are connected has an output of nearly 12,000,000 pairs of shoes per year, and is rated in Dun's and Bradstreet's for millions of dollars. When the fire broke out the Interstate Company had thousands and thousands of pairs of shoes in their big stocks—made up for this season's business.

These were of a most varied kind—men's, women's and children's—in all the latest Spring styles—worth $2.50 to $5.00 per pair. On the completion of the fire insurance companies' adjustments I was invited by the Interstate Co. to make a bid for the entire salvaged stock, and as a result it was sold to me at practically a give-away price.

In my big sale today I will offer no goods which are not of practical value. The shoes which were burned and thus made unfit to wear have been sold in bulk to a big Lincoln Street jobber. And the stock which remains and will be sold during the next 3 days is only slightly affected by smoke or water. Most of it has not been touched at all and is absolutely perfect.

A Single Drop of Water Gives You the Bargain of a Lifetime

For Convenience in Selling, I Have Divided This Stock Into 4 Big Lots at the Following Prices:

GENERAL VILLA, MEXICAN BANDIT LEADER, HAS COMMITTED NINE HUNDRED MURDERS

LODGE'S EXPOSURE OF OUTLAW IN FULL

In order to give the public the most accurate possible picture of Francisco Villa, rebel general, on whom Secretary Bryan is prepared to cast the toga of power in Mexico, the AMERICAN today prints the following story of Villa's career.

This article was read by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts in the United States Senate yesterday; and the full Senate listened to it with the closest attention.

The article appeared in the London Daily Telegraph of April 15. The Telegraph is a reputable London newspaper. Senator Lodge in introducing the article, said it is valuable as giving names and dates of Villa's life in more accurate fashion than ever before.

The article from the Telegraph lists eleven murders by Villa's own hand, and 889 under his direct order. In addition innumerable cruelties and atrocities are cited.

Senator Lodge said he had been at some pains to learn what he could of Villa, as one of the men likely to come into power in Mexico, and that he offered this biography of Villa for comparison with one the State Department is said to be preparing.

Senator Lodge's quotation from the Telegraph was as follows:

IGNORANT; HE CANNOT READ.

Francisco Villa was born at Las Nieves in the State of Durango about the year 1868. He is wholly uneducated, being unable to read and barely able to sign his name. About the year 1882, when only fourteen years of age, he was sentenced to a term of imprisonment for cattle stealing. On his discharge he settled in the mining camp of Guanacevi, where a few months later he underwent another sentence of imprisonment for homicide. When he came out of prison for the second time he organized a band of robbers, which had their headquarters in the mountainous region of "Perico" in the State of Durango, and were the terror of all that district.

In the year 1907 he was in partnership with one Francisco Reza, stealing cattle in Chihuahua and selling them in the United States, and then stealing mules and horses in the United States and selling them in Chihuahua. In consequence of some disagreement he shot and killed Reza in broad daylight, while sitting in the plaza in the city of Chihuahua. During the early part of November, 1910, he attacked the factory of a Mr. Soto, in Allende, State of Chihuahua, and killed the owner. By threatening the latter's daughter he forced her to show where she had hidden a sum of $11,000, which he stole and used for arming a considerable force.

He then joined Madero's revolution, uniting his band with Urbina's column. In January, 1911, he was at Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, where he killed Carlos Alatorre and Luis Ortiz for refusing to pay him the money he demanded for their ransom. At Batopilas, State of Chihuahua, in February of the same year he tortured a lady named Senora Maria de la Luz Gomez until he made her pay him $30,000. She died from the effects of the barbarous treatment she received.

Francisco Villa, the rebel leader, whose career of crime is bared in the Senate by Senator Lodge.

OUTRAGES AT JUAREZ.

When Ciudad Juarez was taken from the Federals in May, 1913, he killed Senor Ignacio Gomez Oyola, a man of over sixty years of age, under the following circumstances: Having sent for him, Villa asked whether he had any arms in his house, and on saying he had not, Villa, "who was seated on a table," drew his revolver and shot him dead. After rifling the corpse of money and valuables it was thrown into the street.

After the triumph of the revolution, Villa, in November, 1911, obtained a monopoly from the then governor of Chihuahua for the sale of meat in the city of Chihuahua, which he procured by stealing cattle from neighboring farms. Suspecting one of his subordinates, Cristobal Juarez, of stealing on his own account, he killed him one night in the latter part of November in the Calle de la Libertad.

In the early part of May, 1913, Villa, with seventy-five men, assaulted a train at Bacta, State of Chihuahua, that was carrying bars of gold and silver valued at 100,000 pesos, killing the crew and several passengers, including Messrs. Caravantes and a Senor Isaac Herrero of Ciudad, Guerrero.

Later in the same month he entered the town of San Andres, Chihuahua, and assaulted the house of Senor Sabas Murga, a hacendado, who, with his two sons, tried to defend themselves. Two of his nephews were killed, but the Murgas got away. Villa then got hold of two sons-in-law of Murga who had not taken any part in the fight, and after torturing them to say where their father-in-law had hidden his money, he had them killed.

SACKS TOWN; SHOOTS PRISONERS.

Toward the end of the month Villa's band took the town of Sta. Rosalia, Chihuahua, shooting all prisoners and treating the principal officers with terrible cruelty. Colonel Pueblocita was shot and his body dragged along the streets of the town. The commercial houses of Messrs. Vincenti, Sarli, Cia Harineru, Sordo y Blanco (Spaniards) and many others were totally sacked. Many private persons were murdered, one of the worst cases being that of a Spaniard, Senor Montilla, cashier of the house of Sordo y Blanco, who was shot over the head of his wife, who tried to defend him. Villa personally kicked her in the face as she lay on the dead body of her husband. He also himself killed a Senor Ramos, secretary of the Court of First Instance.

He arrested more than twenty of the principal people of Sta. Rosalia, torturing them and taking them out to be shot, until he obtained from them 70,000 pesos, which were collected by several people in order to save their lives. One of these was a lady, Senora Maria B. Coviero, who was herself also tortured until the sum Villa wanted was forthcoming.

In July, 1913, Villa took Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, and shot more than eighty non-combatants, violating several young girls, amongst them being two young ladies named Castillo.

He also attacked and took the town of San Andres, which was held by the Federals, in September, 1913, shooting many peaceable residents and more than 150 prisoners, many of these being women and children. In shooting these people, in order to economize cartridges, he placed one behind the other up to five at one time, very few of them being killed outright. The bodies of the dead and wounded were then soaked with petroleum and thrown into bonfires prepared for the purpose. The prisoners were forced themselves to make the bonfire and cover with petroleum the rest of the victims.

KILLS OLD MAN WITH OWN HAND.

After this he went to the small town of Carretas, where he took prisoner an old man of more than seventy years of age, named Jose Dolores Moreno, demanding from him a ransom of $200. As he could not pay Villa killed him with his own hand.

On September 29, 1913, Villa, having overpowered a force of over 500 Federals commanded by General Alvirez at Aviles, fifteen kilometres from Torreon, had every prisoner shot.

Toward the end of November he took the city of Juarez by surprise. Nearly all the Federal officers who were taken there were shot, as well as some sixty non-combatants, most of them inferior employes and servants. The higher employes had managed to escape across the river to the American city of El Paso, Texas.

On December 8, 1913, Villa took possession of the town of Chihuahua, which had been abandoned by the Federals since November 28, seizing all the commercial houses of Spaniards and Mexicans down to the smallest bars and dry stores, besides some owned by other foreigners.

Before Villa expelled all the Spaniards, obliging more than 500 Spanish families to leave within three days. Only two Spaniards disobeyed this order—namely, two brothers, Martinez, owners of a small eating house. Villa thereupon ordered them to be beaten to death.

CHILDREN HELD FOR RANSOM.

Senor Pedro Olivares, an old and very infirm man, whose shop, under the name of Jose Ma Sanchez, Successor, had been already plundered, is being held until he pays $50,000 ransom. He has already paid $10,000 for two of his children, these also having been held for ransom. Villa also took prisoners two children of fourteen years of age called Lorenzo Arollano and Alfonso Molinez, sons of two gentlemen who were able to leave Chihuahua before Villa arrived.

BANDIT BRYAN WOULD HONOR CANNOT READ

Many private houses have been occupied by Villa's men, who use their carriages and automobiles. These last are placed at the disposal of public women for their daily orgies.

The house of Senors T. S. Vda. de Prieto is also occupied by the rebels. This lady paid 25,000 pesos to Villa to allow her to leave the town.

Villa has shot in Chihuahua 150 non-combatants, the greater number being poor people who could not leave for want of means, or because they thought they ran no risks, as they took no part in politics. For all the people in any way connected with the government had left before Villa entered the city. Special mention may be made of the case of Senor Ignacio Iriogoyen and Senor Jose A. Yanez, who, though in no way connected with politics, were taken by Villa and tortured for several days with threats to shoot them until they paid ransoms of $20,000 each. Having obtained from Villa himself safe conducts to leave by train for the border, the train in which they were was caught up at the station of Montezuma by a locomotive in which were several officers in Villa's conndence, headed by an ex-Maderista deputy called Miguel Baca Ronquillo, who took them from the train and shot them in the presence of the passengers.

FUNSTON PREPARED FOR ATTACK BY MAAS

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Fearing an artillery attack by hostile Mexicans, after two demands from General Maas' officers for the surrender of the American forces at El Tejar, General Funston, according to dispatches received here today, has planned to distribute troops between Vera Cruz and the Tejar outposts.

To guard against this possibility, in addition to the field guns already landed from the war vessels, General Funston has placed twenty-four powerful pieces of marine artillery in a suitable position for defence.

The rearrangement of troops, he explains, will prevent the Federals from cutting off the Americans at Tejar. Federals, stretching in a semi-circle twenty miles from the coast line to a point several miles beyond the pumping station, are reinforced and an attack on the American lines is believed to be imminent.

A report in current that quarters are in readiness on board a foreign cruiser for a high Mexican official from the Federal capital.

It was suggested that the official might be General Huerta or General Blanquet or both. Close observers expressed the belief that Huerta's recent solicitude for the safe exit of Americans was designed to insure safe conduct for himself.

Reports of the destruction of the San Francisco bridge on the Interocean Railway and of one near Vera Cruz were today confirmed.

The Soledad bridge is reported mined.

In a dispatch to Consul Corlito, who represents the rebels at Los Angeles, Cal., Villa declared today:

"I will take Mexico City, capture Huerta and execute him in three weeks time, if the United States troops do not interfere.

"Nothing can stop me now. I can see only the downfall of Huerta and his death. Then, capture of Mexico City by me will mean the establishment of peace throughout Mexico forever. The dictator must fall."

HUERTA SAYS HE WON'T QUIT.

After an interview with Huerta, the London Daily Mail's correspondent in Mexico City quoted him as saying:

"I have no thought of resigning the office which has been conferred upon me by the republic.

"The conduct of my government and of the Mexican people toward the Americans remaining here during the conflict is my best answer to your question about my attitude toward the Americans.

"I am in the best of health."

The hospital ship Solace has been ordered to proceed north at once, either to New York or Boston, with the sailors wounded during the occupation of Vera Cruz.

Secretary Daniels declared today that this was being done because he feared the Mexican climate might possibly be bad for the patients, and he wished to take no chances of having their recovery retarded.

The revolt of General Olea, a trusted Huerta officer in the northern part of Mexico, was reported today.

It is declared that Huerta believes the American troops will not attempt an advance on Mexico City.

He is said to feel certain there will be no war between the United States and Mexico.

PEACE ENVOYS PLAN TO HOLD CONFERENCE IN CANADA, MAY 18

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The three South American envoys will go up into Canada to make their attempt to settle the differences between the United States and Huerta.

Secretary Bryan announced the decision of the three diplomats in the following statement:

"The mediators have notified the different parties that Niagara Falls, Canada, has been selected as the place where the mediators will confer with representatives of the different parties interested in the mediation and that the 18th of May has been fixed as the date when the conference will begin."

The American government has not yet chosen its representatives.

For the time being General Carranza and the Constitutionalists have been eliminated from the mediation plans. The telegram sent by Carranza by the peace envoys, withdrawing their invitation to him to attend the conference has been made public, but the wording is such that the invitation will be renewed providing General Carranza declares an armistice until the meeting is over.

Representatives of official Washington, in close touch with Villa, said today they thought Carranza will enter into the peace negotiations. This is believed to be the cause of the delay in naming the men who will represent the United States, as the administration is figuring on sending the same number of diplomats to Niagara Falls as there are representatives of Huerta and Carranza.

MEDIATORS WILL SEND ENVOYS TO SEE CARRANZA

WASHINGTON, May 6.—General Carranza's refusal to send a representative to the envoys of Argentina, Brazil and Chili today caused them to decide to send their representatives to him, according to a report in diplomatic circles. It is stated that an attache of the Brazilian embassy or the legations of Argentina or Chili here will be selected to parley for peace with Carranza.

Belief that further telegraphic communication with Carranza would be futile and conviction that the ultimate success of the mediation negotiations depends upon whether the rebel chief joins in the negotiations is said to have caused the A. B. C. envoys to send a spokesman to him.

FEDERAL TROOPS MAINTAIN PEACE IN MINE DISTRICT

DENVER, May 6.—The United States troops sent to the coal region by President Wilson completely controlled the situation today and peace prevailed. Strike-breakers in the northern coal fields, centering in Boulder county, declared today that they would not work if the mine guards were disarmed unless Federal troops were stationed on the mine property to protect them.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp—At Once

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff at once, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it.

For Sallow, Wrinkled, Freckled, Pimpled Skin

If you have any cutaneous blemish, don't use paint, powder or anything else to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimples, blackheads, moth-patches, sallowness, red or yellow blotches, or any surface eruptions. The affected cuticle is absorbed, a little each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought to view. Ask the druggist for an ounce of mercolized wax, and use like cold cream. Remove in morning with soap and water. Many who have tried this simple and harmless treatment report astonishing results.

To prevent wrinkles, stretch your face a few times each morning before arising. Powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel will prove remarkably effective.

HUERTA TOTTERING; TROOPS IN REVOLT

coast of Mexico. The only liners touching there are Japanese.

By THOMAS P. COATES.

Special Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

VERA CRUZ, May 6.—With reinforced Mexican Constitutionalists attacking Tampico and other forces marching on Saltillo and San Luis Potosi, the power of President Huerta is steadily waning, his government is tottering because of factional strife in his Cabinet and the end is believed to be only a matter of a few weeks.

After Huerta, what?

This is the question that officers of the army and navy of the United States are discussing today. Complete anarchy, hitherto held in check by the iron hand of the dictator, is expected to prevail throughout the south, as the government forces are withdrawn from outlying districts to concentrate for the last stand of Huerta.

WILL LOOT AND BURN TOWNS.

As soon as the Federal forces that have checked the bandit raids of General Zapata are called in to oppose the attacks of the Constitutionalists pouring down from the north the Zapata forces will loot and burn the southern towns and devastate the entire country.

Huesta is expected to concentrate all the forces he can spare at Queretaro, 167 miles from the capital. This is a strategic railway point, the lines to the north and west forming a junction there. How large a force the dictator can gather is problematical.

It is pretty well understood that General Villa expects to have a combined army of at least 25,000 men under his command when he advances on Queretaro.

HUNDREDS DESERT HUERTA.

Refugees who have arrived here declare that hundreds of Huerta's soldiers have deserted and that as the Constitutionalists advance this number will be swelled to thousands. Some of the Federal deserters have already formed guerrilla bands that are harassing the Federals long in advance of the arrival of the Constitutionalists.

General Obregon and the 4,000 Federal troops at San Luis Potosi are reported to have declared for General Carranza, and will surrender that town without resistance. General Barron is still holding on grimly at Zacatecas, having repulsed Constitutionalist emissaries who sought to induce him to betray Huerta.

Confirmation has been received here of reports that the San Francisco bridge and another small railway culvert near Vera Cruz have been blown up by the Mexicans. This will materially hamper the movement of American troops if they are ordered to advance on Mexico City.

SOLEDAD BRIDGE INTACT.

Lieutenant Bellinger, the naval aviator, has found that the Soledad bridge is still intact, but this is believed to have been mined. Bellinger was receiving congratulations on all sides today over a narrow escape from death that he had while scouting yesterday. Caught in a fifty-mile gale while 2,000 feet above Tejar, the aeroplane was buffeted so severely that the aviator will have to use another machine for a few days.

"It looked pretty ticklish for a while," said Bellinger today. "The gale caught me while I was taking pictures, and for a few minutes it looked as if it was all off. When I ascended it was perfectly calm, and I had no idea of coming trouble until the wind currents caught my machine and almost tilted it upside down.

NEW ORLEANS, May 6.—The stories that have of late become so terribly familiar, of Mexican outrages against women; Mexican robbery, Mexican arson and Mexican murder, were repeated here today by refugees who have arrived by hundreds from Mexican gulf ports.

The stories are in some cases hearsay—in other cases direct evidence. John W. Sargent and J. M. B. Hard, who told of assaults on American women by Mexicans, said they were willing to swear to their stories.

Dr. Margaret Cartwright, a missionary who conducted a Methodist hospital at Guanajuato, north of Mexico City, described the killing of a father, daughter and son who were friendly to Americans.

"Just before the attack on Vera Cruz," she said, "several Mexicans who loved me and were friendly to Americans called to say there would be no danger in so far as my staying at Guanajuato was concerned and begged that I remain with them. The delegation that waited upon me was headed by an educated baker, who had shown great interest in the work undertaken by me and my associates.

"But the baker had hardly reached his shop after seeing me before he was waited upon, not by a peaceful gathering, but by a mob angered because of his friendship for Americans. The mob dragged him from his bakery, telling his eighteen-year-old daughter, one of the most lovely and beautiful girls I had ever seen, that they were going to take him to Mexico City for imprisonment.

"As a matter of fact, they executed him in the outskirts of the city, but the news of this never reached the daughter and her little brother, twelve years old.

"Frantic, the girl decided to make for Mexico City with all speed in the hope of persuading Huerta to liberate her father. She had gone but part of the way when she was dragged from the train, assuited so that she died a few hours later and her little brother was executed."

WAITING WIFE STRICKEN.

Dr. W. T. Tivy, a dentist of Mexico City, formerly of St. Louis, was so hastily transferred to a steamship at Vera Cruz from another vessel that had brought him down the coast from Tuxpam that he was unable to reach his wife, who fell ill while waiting for him in Vera Cruz. She is still there, so far as he knows.

"It is generally known in Mexico," said Dr. Tivy, "that the principal reason that Villa and Carranza are able to hold together their large armies is that they give their men all the chance they want at women, the young girls and the loot in every town, village or ranch they capture.

"I was told at Tuxpam that a prosperous German rancher and his wife and four young daughters were victims of the worst outrages. Their home was a few miles from Tuxpam. A detachment of rebel soldiers demanded money of the German. He gave them some and declared he had no more. They bound him in front of his house.

"The three daughters, the eldest not more than seventeen and the youngest about thirteen, were dragged out before the father and mother and attacked. The husband was tortured to death and the three daughters were carried away. They were never heard from afterward."

CONSUL A REAL HERO.

Gaston Schmuts, a New Orleans man, who is American Consul at Aguascalientes, stands out as one of the real heroes of the Mexican situation. H. G. Bretherton, Vice-Consul at Aguascalientes, who came here on the liner Monterey, vouches for all that is said about his superior's conduct. Mr. Bretherton is a native of Porto Mont, and has served under Consul Schmuts for two years.

Mr. Schmuts covered himself with glory," said Mr. Bretherton.

"The consul spent days and nights going through the district adjacent to Aguascalientes, doing all in his power to assist Americans as well as people of other nationalities.

"On April 22 a mob of several hundred Mexicans marched up to the building occupied by the American consulate, and when Mr. Schmuts appeared they demanded that he haul down the American flag. Mr. Schmuts stood in the doorway and told the rabble that he could not comply with their request.

"In order to gain time we telephoned the Governor, and he lost no time in coming to our assistance. But before his arrival the leaders of the mob told Mr. Schmuts that they would tear the American flag down with their own hands and raise the Mexican colors in its stead.

"Reaching behind him on a small table Mr. Schmuts picked up a revolver and declared:

"'You may take this flag down, but you will have to do so over my dead body.'

"The flag stayed where it was."

Four more American bluejackets and marines came to kilLing two American women was also told at Quarantine here.

Mrs. Mary Archer and Miss Grace Cornell, who had fled from Mexico City, arrived in Vera Cruz the day before the U. S. marines and bluejackets landed. The two women took rooms at the Diligencias and the next day found it transformed suddenly into an arsenal. The hotel was a target for the fire of the marines, because a company of Mexican sharpshooters had taken possession of the hotel and were firing upon the Americans.

Mrs. Archer and Miss Cornell bandaged the wounded Mexicans with clothing torn from their dresses and from clothes taken from their trunks and carried dead bodies into a hallway, where they covered them with improvised sheets. They stuck to their task all that day and night and on the next day were found, almost exhausted, by the American forces.

"Of course," said Mrs. Archer, "many of the bullets came near hitting us and several Mexican soldiers were killed while standing close by, but we were shoved into a back room and told to care for the wounded. Several died while we were trying to aid them."

First photograph of the American outpost at Vera Cruz. Water works at El Tejar. The Mexicans have once demanded the surrender of the force here, and General Funston sent reinforcements and extended his lines to prepare for an attack.

BULLETINS

LOS ANGELES, May 6.—Reports received here today state that Mexican Federals and Constitutionalists fought a battle at Masalan on Tuesday. The rebels are said to have put a Federal gunboat out of commission and she had to be beached. Americans there are reported to have been taken aboard a steamer in the harbor for protection.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Senor Oliveira, Brazilian minister at Mexico City, notified the State Department today that United States Consul Bonner, who was reported to be held a, waser by the Federals at San Luis Potosi is safe in the Mexican capital and will leave tomorrow for Vera Cruz accompanied by his wife.

FUNSTON ADVANCES OUTPOSTS AND THROWS UP BREASTWORKS

VERA CRUZ, May 6.—General Funston today reported that under the authority given him by Secretary of War Garrison he has advanced his outposts a mile beyond the pumping station. He has thrown up breastworks of sand bags and taken other precautionary measures.

"Funston has discretionary powers to protect his position and will take every precaution to insure the safety of the American forces at Vera Cruz," said Secretary Garrison.

In view of the alarming situation that has developed through the concentration of troops under General Maas, army officials believe Secretary Garrison will within a few days take steps to reinforce the American troops at Vera Cruz. The remainder of Funston's forces will probably leave Galveston the latter part of this week. Funston lacks mountain artillery because of the inability to transport mules from Galveston. These will be sent to him at once.

IF SKIN ITCHES AND BREAKS OUT APPLY SULPHUR

Get Ounce of Bold-Sulphur Cream and Heal Eczema Eruptions Right Up.

For years, common bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous affections, by reason of its parasite-destroying property. It is not only parasiticidal, but also antipruritic, antiseptic and remarkably healing in irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin.

The moment you apply it to an itching or broken out skin the itching stops and the healing begins, says a noted dermatologist. Just common bold-sulphur made into a thick cream effects such prompt and remarkable results, even in aggravated Eczema, that it is a never-ending source of amazement to physicians.

While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the angry itching and irritation and heal the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.

Any good pharmacist will supply an ounce of bold-sulphur cream which should be applied to the irritated or inflamed parts, like the ordinary cold creams. It isn't unpleasant, and the prompt relief afforded is very welcome, particularly when the eruption is accompanied with itching.—This is published for Walter Luther Dodge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

HAPPENINGS IN SOCIETY

ETHEL FAIRFAX WALLACE, BRIDE-TO-BE, FETED

FASHIONABLES FLOCKING EARLY TO THEIR NORTH SHORE ESTATES

Just at present society seems flooded with brides, and there is little said or done these days that does not in some way pertain to them and their affairs. Among the prominent ones of the near future is pretty Ethel Fairfax Wallace, whose engagement was recently announced to George Chapin Proctor of Winchester.

Miss Wallace is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Fairfax Wallace of Winchester. She is having all sorts of delightful things done in her honor since the announcement of her engagement. She is a native of Philadelphia and is a descendant on her father's side of General William Brooks of the Revolution and on her mother's side from Colonel S. Boyer Davis of Delamore place, Wilmington.

Miss Wallace is charming and has a host of friends, all anxious to do her honor at this particular time. She is a niece of Colonel Hamilton S. Wallace, U. S. A., and of Mrs. Glover Perin of Brussels.

Mr. and Mrs. William Spence, who have been dividing their Winter between Winthrop and Brookline, are sailing for Europe on the 16th. They will first go to Paris and will return to Boston late in July.

Among the interesting weddings of the month will be that on the 27th of Miss Helen Lincoln Appleton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Appleton of Brooklyn, and Charles A. Read, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Read of "Read's Island," Manchester.

Mr. Read is a Harvard man, class of '11. His sister is Mrs. Francis Lowell Burnett (Helen Read) of Beacon street, and another sister is Miss Charlotte L. Read, who last Winter gave up all the pleasures of her debutante season and went into settlement work, in which she is making decidedly rapid strides.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Haughton have gone to their fine estate, Gould Island, Newport, for the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Rackemann have just arrived at the Red Lion Inn, Stockbridge, where they will spend several days. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brooks, who have been registered there for some time, have gone to Albany by automobile.

The South End Music School, in which so many fashionables are interested, was helped considerably by the concert for which Mrs. F. L. W. Richardson opened her beautiful home at Charles River View. The music school has recently been moved into its new quarters at No. 32 Rutland street. The Adamowski trio played an interesting program of music, and Miss Mary Peck, who gives so liberally of her time and talents at the various philanthropic affairs, sang a number of French and English songs.

The D. A. R., in conjunction with the Massachusetts Peace Society, will give a play on May 13 and 14. This play is intended to celebrate Peace Day, which occurs May 18. Miss Priscilla May and Mrs. Bentley Sayward take the leading character parts. The words of the play were written by Mrs. May. Saturday afternoon, immediately following the performance, a dessert will be held, at which Miss May and Marshall Hall will present "the legacy of the renaissance of modern and classical dancing."

Miss Irene Bewley, who read the character parts of the play, "Mary Jane's Pa," with considerable skill before a fashionable audience at the Copley-Plaza the other day, was becomingly gowned in pink. Tuesday at noon Miss Bewley sailed for Prince Edward Island. She intends to remain there six weeks or more and give a series of readings for various clubs.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Bigelow of Commonwealth avenue are to go to their Summer home at Cohasset this week. Their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bremer, have already arrived at their Cohasset estate for the Summer.

The Washington B. Thomases closed their beautiful estate, "Netherfield," at Pride's Crossing for the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hall of Beacon street, who have taken a home at Manchester for the season, will occupy it the last of the month. Last year the Halls occupied "Longehures," the Merrill cottage at Smith's Point, Manchester.

Hersey B. Goodwin Dies in Cambridge

Hersey B. Goodwin, first president of the Chamber of Commerce, is dead at his home, No. 8 Follen street, Cambridge. In 1906 he was appointed to the Board of Railroad Commissioners by Governor Wolcott and held that office until 1909.

ROCKEFELLERS TO HIDE UNTIL MINE WAR ENDS

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., May 6.—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., and his son have gone into midwinter retirement at Pocantico Hills. Friends of the family declare it is doubtful if either will venture off the grounds until the Colorado coal mine strike is settled.

Not so much fear, as wounded pride, will keep them in seclusion, it is said. Both feel that President Wilson unnecessarily held them up in public view.

The Rockefeller estate is prepared against eventualities. Two hundred men have been divided into day and night shifts and every approach to the home of elder Rockefeller is heavily guarded. Ostensibly there is one man at each entrance. But on the appearance of a stranger two or three more spring up from behind hedges and the high stone wall. The guards answer questions politely, but keep always between the stranger and the house.

Similar guards patrol inside the wall. A second line of defence, it is stated, has been established close to the houses.

NEW YORK, May 6.—General Felix Dias is here, and not on his way to Mexico, as has been reported in Vera Cruz, according to Senor Villar, with whom General Dias makes his home.

DENOUNCES WILSON'S POLICY ON TOLLS AS INSULT TO NATION

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Declaring the fight against free tolls was due to the influence of Great Britain, the Carnegie plan of a "future United States of Great Britain," the Canadian and American transcontinental railroads and the shipping trust, Senator Bradley of Kentucky in the Senate today attacked President Wilson and the repeal bill.

He charged Andrew Carnegie with working to obtain a union of States in which England should be "first among equals" and the President with having insulted Congress and the country.

"This man Carnegie," he declared, "hand in hand with the ship-owning and transcontinental railroads and the coterie that surrounds him is attempting to persuade American citizens to surrender the sovereignty and honor of their country. A repeal will be an acknowledgment of the criminal bad faith of Congress and an humble and servile surrender of the sovereign right to control our democratic concerns."

WAVE OF SUBSIDY.

Discussing the influence of the Carnegie Peace Foundation in behalf of the repeal movement, Senator Bradley declared that it had disseminated literature broadcast over the nation to create sentiment sustaining the British demands.

"Nor has the expenditure been confined alone to the Peace Foundation," he continued, "Newspapers have been induced through misrepresentation, falsehood or otherwise to publish articles favorable to the British point of view. Ministers of the gospel, inspired by love of peace and fear of war have expressed themselves favorably in many instances, having either not read or not understood the treaty and a considerable number of college professors, in many instances to obtain notoriety and probably in some instances to qualify themselves for the receipt of a Carnegie pension have expressed themselves antagonistically to their own country. The trouble seems to be with the President" he said, "that he thinks he is not a part of the country but that the country and Congress are a part of him. The message of the President is nothing short of an insult to those members of Congress who voted for the present law.

PUTS BLAME ON CONGRESS.

"He knew when he delivered it that toll exemption law was the deliberate act of Congress, notwithstanding the pending protest of Great Britain, and yet he charges Congress not with having complied in good faith with a plain contravention of the treaty."

"In other words, he charges that Congress deliberately violated a solemn treaty and besmirched the nation's honor, and to add insult to injury after having thus condemned us he asks us to confess the truth of the charge by repealing the law. Surely no self-respecting Congress will tamely submit to this insult, much less confess its guilt. Our chief magistrate should hold the honor of Congress in high esteem; but instead he places his seal of criminality upon the great lawmaking body of the United States.

"He says in his message, 'I ask this of you in support of the foreign policy of the administration.' In view of the policy he has pursued with Mexico, that reason would furnish the very best ground for refusing to grant the refuest. The trouble has been that the administration until recently made a feeble stand, with the dove of peace in one hand and a jug of grape juice in the other proclaiming in mellifluous tones 'In hoc signo vinces.'

IDEALS TOO HIGH.

"I agree that the President has been actuated by an honest endeavor to procure peace and a constitutional government in Mexico. However, his ideals are too high to be realized. You might as well undertake to establish a Sunday School in hell as real constitutional government in Mexico by Mexicans.

"I have always been an advocate of peace. No one more pleads and despises war; but I am opposed to buying peace with money or with a sacrifice of the nation's rights. I am opposed to peace at any price. Peace cannot reign at the expense of justice and honor, unless it be the peace of cowardice, the peace of despotism or the face of death."

Pet Bull Terrier Has $200 Funeral

NEW YORK, May 6.—Wreaths of flowers covered a handsome oak coffin in which "Tuck Lents Crawford," a sixteen-year-old bull terrier, was buried in Cypress Hills Cemetery. Nearly $200, set aside ten years ago by the will of Harry Lents, at one time a New York sporting man, was used in defraying the cost of the funeral. The dog had been Mr. Lents's pet.

Report Lady Scott Will Marry Barrie

LONDON, May 6.—The rumor is current that Lady Scott, the widow of Captain Robert F. Scott, the Antarctic explorer, is engaged to marry Sir James M. Barrie, the playwright. The wedding, it is said, is to take place soon.

In February last it was reported that he had contributed $50,000 to a fund to equip Sir Ernest Shackleton's Antarctic expedition. Barrie's first wife was Mary Ansell, the actress. They were divorced in April, 1910.

HAVE COLOR IN YOUR CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets.

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

If you want a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no disagreeable after-effects. They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box.

G.V. Mercedes Trucks

Five to Six Tons Capacity

The heavy duty G. V. Mercedes is a giant in strength, yet light and flexible. With its long wheel base, it can be turned in a 60 foot street, with trailer attached.

The load is carried on a solid forged axle. The antique drive is wonderfully efficient. With trucks of this size, it is superior to the chain, the worm or the bevel drive. The Mercedes drive has been used without essential alteration for the last 14 years.

G. V. Mercedes Heavy Duty Chassis

The valve-in-the-head-motor is powerful but not too heavy. Its fuel economy is wonderful, 6 miles per gallon with a 6-ton truck being secured in a recent test. The cooling system is so excellent that the Mercedes has never been heated under any hot weather conditions yet encountered.

Start right by buying a real cross country truck! It will make money for you instead of just breaking even with horses in cost, as so many trucks do that get out of order so often. Run in and see the G. V. Mercedes, now. If you can't spare the time, send your Engineer or Superintendent. This truck is there!

PRINCES' TRUST IN GERMANY COLLAPSES; DROPS $50,000,000

The inside story of how a combination of high finance and high nobility in Germany failed utterly is told by our special correspondent in Berlin.

The famous Princes' Trust has crumpled up.

In six short years one member has sunk $25,000,000, while his partner, a "crony" of the Kaiser, is out quite as much.

Our correspondent says:

"This chapter of dilettantism and high birth in finance will long rank as one of Germany's big financial disasters."

By Our Special Financial Correspondent in Berlin.

A tragic story of lost millions is the collapse of the so-called Princes' Trust—and of millions lost with appalling speed.

Only ten years ago the public first heard of Prince Hohenlohe-Oehringen's project to establish a sanatorium for consumptives in the Canary Islands. Some three years later he joined his financial undertakings with those of a close friend of the Kaiser, Prince Fuerstenberg, who was operating in Berlin omnibus lines and real estate.

This combination of two scions of Germany's highest and most ancient nobility was dubbed the Princes' Trust. The nearest approach to an actual organization warranting the designation was the so-called Handelsvereinigung, a financing company in general control of the Princes' enterprises.

NEW THING IN FINANCE.

The trust, at any rate, was a new thing in German finance. Except for Prince Henckel von Donnersmarck, the great coal and iron magnate of Silesia, the high nobility had held proudly aloof from commerce and finance.

The Princes' Trust, therefore, was interpreted as a sign of the changing spirit of the time. Germany was growing modern. The Kaiser was doing everything possible to encourage business. His bosom friend, Fuerstenberg, and his distant relative, Hohenlohe, fancied they were almost discharging a public service when they joined their immense fortunes and inaugurated a series of big financial exploits.

Though very rich, the Princes were new to finance. They had held their property in forms that required no particular financial ability to manage it—Fuerstenberg in lands and Hohenlohe in lands and zinc and coal mines.

Fuerstenberg had already fallen into the hands of bad financial advisers before he joined Hohenlohe; and later both men showed that in running their "trust" they were not good judges of human nature. They put in as general manager of the Handelsvereinigung a man who had been their helter-skelter into various unsafe ventures.

MANY LOSING VENTURES.

The Verein[illegible] went into potash mines when it was already evident that this industry would soon reach a crisis through over-production. They entered Berlin real estate at the top of a boom. They annexed a building company when building had been overdone and an ebb was about to set in.

Hohenlohe brought into the trust a big interest in the German Levant Line, which trades between Hamburg and Eastern Mediterranean ports. For several years the trust tried to get into the North Atlantic trade.

They planned a line between Emden and New York, and a company was organized. It came to nothing, however, because the Imperial Government refused to grant it a charter to carry emigrants. In short, the Hamburg-American and North German-Lloyd lines blocked the way.

Now the trust has sold its Levant stock to the Hamburg-American. Its directors have resigned and the Princes are now out of the steamship business altogether.

In connection with the Levant line the Palestine Bank, with some half dozen branches in the Eastern Mediterranean, was established. Its capital was finally raised to $6,000,000 in order to use the German head office for handling the Princes' financial operations at home.

BANK TO BE LIQUIDATED.

Although the bank has been paying good dividends, it is to be liquidated. Its home offices will be closed and the branches in the Levant sold—apparently to the Deutsche Bank, which has charge of the trust's liquidation.

The most unfortunate investment was in W. Wertheim, Limited, a big company operating three department stores in Berlin. That firm failed recently.

A dismal story of financial loss has come out in connection with it. One of the holding companies of the trust erected a great building for a conglomeration of shops under a single management; but this failed. The building company, which had been compelled to take over the building in payment for erecting it, induced the Wertheim firm to rent it. But Wertheim proved not only unable to pay rent, but became a blood-leech upon the Princes' finances. Throwing good money after bad, the Princes made heavy advances to Wertheim and finally took charge of the business themselves. This throwing away of money went on for several years before matters, as now turns out, lost some $6,000,000 in the undertaking in about four years.

A host of small creditors are now clamoring for a settlement, but they will get next to nothing.

OVER $150,000,000 GONE.

Remedied only before this failure the Princes had agreed to settle their affairs by dividing holdings.

Fuerstenberg gets out with a building company upon his hands, and his broad acres and manorial home in South Germany heavily mortgaged. His actual losses nobody has even attempted to estimate.

Hohenlohe takes what is left, which makes him the heavier loser of the two. His holdings are now placed at $30,000,000, but his debts are not much less, and it will be years before he even knows what he can call his own. From evidence at hand it is certain he has managed within a half-dozen years to let not less than $25,000,000 slip away from him.

This chapter of dilettantism and high-birth in finance will long rank as one of Germany's big financial disasters. Fortunately it does not greatly concern the stock markets, as the trust held no stocks that will have to be thrown on the market.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were dull and lower today, but recessions averaged small. During the morning in New York share transactions totalled under 112,600 and there was even less activity at midday and early in the afternoon. Traders as a class were more bearish and inclined to take immediate profits, when there were any in sight. There was satisfaction in financial circles over the report that leaders plan to adjourn Congress on July 15, whether or not trust legislation the rural credits bill have passed. But it is not stated that President Wilson will approve. He, it is understood, has intended to remain in Washington all Summer to attend to Mexican and other foreign affairs. Most members of Congress are anxious to get home and attend to political fences.

In New York early in the afternoon recessions included Canadian Pacific ¼, Southern Pacific ¼, Missouri Pacific ⅝, American Telephone ¼, American Smelting ½, Northern Pacific ½, Baltimore & Ohio ¼ and Chesapeake & Ohio ¼. Among gains were Reading ⅛, Lehigh Valley ⅝, New Haven ¾, American Can ¼ and Union Pacific ¼. The tone was then a little firmer than it had been during most of the morning.

The feature in Boston was the rise in Greene-Cananea, which advanced 2⅜ on the strength of more peace talk between Mexico and the United States. Old Dominion gained ⅜, Island Creek at one time had showed a point gain. Shoe common was a strong Industrial. Among declines were Boston & Maine ⅝, New Haven ¼, Elevated ¾, Fruit ⅞, American Telephone ¼ and Calumet & Arizona ½. The latter had partly recovered its morning loss.

OPENED ON LOWER LEVEL.

When the New York market started prices were on a slightly lower level, following the London lead, where Americans with very few exceptions ranged lower in the afternoon. The weakness in that market was not confined to International stocks, which, in fact, were relatively stronger than home securities. The heaviness of coppers was the feature abroad. The latest Lloyd George budget is viewed by the city Hebrew with disgust and alarm. In fact, they entertain as much distrust of their own present government as Wall Street is supposed to feel toward the Wilson administration. It is said there was some selling of Americans in London on New York account. But such business was limited.

BEARS NOT AGGRESSIVE.

Bears were not aggressive in New York when that market began, nor later during the morning. They were chary about beginning a broad campaign, for sentiment seems to be more optimistic and the recent upturn was unexpected and to certain speculative interests a matter of embarrassment. It is expected that the eastern railroads are going to get some increase in freight rates, and western roads are looking forward to very heavy crop traffic in the Autumn. There is belief in some influential quarters that business depression has touched bedrock. If so, however, there is also fear that it will remain there for some time longer. Almost every condition indicates that safety lies in caution.

Selling pressure was light during the morning, but on the other hand there was very little demand for stocks. If there has been accumulation recently it evidently stopped as soon as prices began to creep upward. The demand appears to be confined to the bargain counter. The decline in Northern Pacific after denial of the stock issue rumor is not easily explained, unless it may be said that these are times when recuperation is difficult for any stock. The public is as indifferent at present to the market as it has been at any time in months.

NOONTIME RANGE WAS HIGHER.

By noontime most issues were above their low for the morning, but a little under yesterday's final price and the volume of business was light. There was little said about the Mexican situation and as a market factor its influence was hard to discern. There was some talk about Paris, which is seen after the yellow metal, drawing a large amount of gold from New York. This was prompted by the advance in the sterling exchange rate yesterday. But money is so plentiful that an outward movement of gold does not excite much apprehension.

The steel trade is reported to be growing duller instead of brisker and buying of copper metal is said to have almost ceased. Most transactions are for small amounts and the selling is by small dealers at, it is stated, so low a price as 14¼ cents a pound.

BOSTON MARKET WAS QUIET.

Prices were irregular when the Boston market opened and afterwards it was a reflex of the one in New York. There was not much business in stocks in this city. During the morning trading was almost without feature or interest. Price changes were narrow. By noon Calumet & Arizona and Tamarack were off a point each and Greene-Cananea was showing a good gain. Miners was no demand for most copper issues.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The net mill profits of the Utah Copper Co. for the first quarter this year amounted to $1,658,998, compared with $1,110,346 for the corresponding 1913 period. Chino's net revenues of the first 1914 quarter amounted to $1,177,740, compared with $778,404.

The London copper warrants market opened quiet and stayed so. By noon spot was off 2s. 6d. and futures 2s. 9d.

The writer not long since was suffering from an intense headache. His physician advised the taking of anti-banania tablets. The relief obtained was so wonderful that he thinks it his duty to advise our readers to keep a dozen five grain tablets on hand. Ask for BAK tablets.—Med. Medical Journal.

Harvard's rowing authorities have received permission from the athletic committee to send the second eight and four-oared crews to the so-called "American Henley" at Philadelphia, May 16.

PHILADELPHIA. — Both the varsity and freshmen crews of the University of Pennsylvania are in fine shape for their races on Saturday against Princeton and Columbia on Carnegie lake.

NEW HAVEN, CT.—Yale's varsity eight-oar crew defeated the second boat in a two-mile brush on the harbor, by a length and a half. No time was given out, but it was said to be fast. The first boat led all the way. Captain Denegre rowed in the second crew.

The Harvard tennis team play the first match of the Crimson's Spring schedule against Dartmouth today. The card includes three matches in doubles and six in singles as compared with two and four a year ago.

* * *

The members of the Harvard freshman crew have elected Randolph R. Brown of Utica, N. Y., captain of the crew. Brown perpared at Middlesex School and is at present stroking the freshman eight.

HANOVER, N. H.—Harry Hillman, the Dartmouth track coach, will not return next year, according to rumor here. Hillman recently lost a child, and it has so affected his wife that she does not want him to locate at Hanover after this Spring.

"Peach" Donovan, the Harvard trainer, is being sought by Penn. as football trainer. Donovan has a contract, however, one more year to run, and it is believed that this will keep him here.

Warner Kent, the Harvard mile runner, will be unable to compete for Harvard against Cornell on Saturday. Kent has broken a small bone in his ankle and will undergo an X-ray examination today.

The following members of the Harvard 1917 soccer team have been awarded numerals:

Applications for tickets for the Intercollegiate meet which will be held at the Stadium on May 29 and 30 will be received by the Harvard Athletic Association from now on until May 22 at 5 p. m.

Leslie McGilvray, the fast Waltham High school outfielder, is making a big hit with a batting average of 481.

Harry Bishop, star catcher on the Huntington School nine this year, had been dropped from the team indefinitely. Bishop is rated as one of the best schoolboy catchers.

Huntington School, Rindge Tech, Cambridge High and Latin and Brookline crew candidates were given a physical examination by Dr. John H. Cummings, Jr., and it is understood all the boys passed. G. K. Captain Wallinge of Huntington crew is out of the boat for a few days, as he has an abscess of the throat.

Sidney Laird, record holder in the Boston regimental games for the intermediate high jump, has been elected captain of the Boston Latin track team to fill the vacancy made when Hamlin left school.

HARVARD CREWS IN LONG ROW DESPITE RAIN

Despite the drizzling rain, the Crimson varsity crews held their lesser oing practice and mushed it up with a paddle over the two-mile course along with the "seconds" and first two freshmen boats.

The four eights rowed down stream to the West Boston Bridge, and on account of the rough water had to empty their shells at the Union Boat Club float.

After being somewhat dried they rowed across to the Cambridge side and started off evenly. As it was to be just a paddle over the course, no racing start was made and they started off rowing about thirty-two, and kept it up throughout. The varsity got along pretty well and finished about three-quarters of a length ahead of the "seconds," who had about a length of open water over the freshmen. The second freshmen were two length behind their first boat.

The varsity boat felt rather light and the watermanship in the rough water was very good. The catch was a little better and the finish was about the same.

Today there will be a real race over the two-mile course between the two varsities.

Manliffe Sargeant was in the coxswain's seat in the varsity boat, Krieger going to the "seconds." He is doing coxswain and has already taken off five pounds. He expects to get down to 118 pounds.

The second inland crew race will be held over a course of one mile and seven-eighths this afternoon, beginning at 4 o'clock. All of the men on the winning boat will be entitled to their class numerals, and will race against the champion Yale class crew on Saturday, May 16.

MANDOT MEETS GRIFFITHS IN BOUT TONIGHT

BOUTS TONIGHT.

Joe Mandot vs. John Griffiths, Racine.

Jack Read vs. "K. O." Sweeney, New Haven.

Fred Haldshand vs. Young Cradwell, Providence.

By JACK CONWAY.

JOE MANDOT, the Southern lightweight who was a contender for the championship before he was knocked out by Willie Ritchie, will battle Johnny Griffiths, the Akron, O., boy, in a ten-round ring tussle in Racine, Wis., this evening. The contest has aroused a great deal of interest throughout the Middle West and is expected to be witnessed by a big crowd of fistic lovers.

Mandot rules a slight favorite in the betting, but he will have to travel at a merry clip if he is to win from Griffiths. The latter has fought most of the star performers and has usually given a good account of himself.

Mandot cannot afford to lose to Griffiths, as he has been signed to a fight Freddy Welsh, the English lightweight champion, in New Orleans on May 25, and if he is defeated by the Akron favorite he would lose his date with Welsh.

THE French youth recently fought Marty McCue, and he surprised the latter's admirers when he bested in an easy winner. Mandot still believes he would have a chance of defeating Willie Ritchie. He says that if he wins from Griffiths and Welsh he will demand a bout with the title holder.

Welsh is also gunning for a "go" with Ritchie. Consequently Mandot will not take things all his own way when he clashes with Welsh.

PLENTY of action is expected at the all-star boxing show which will be held at the University A. C. in Cambridge next Friday night. The "fans" are showing considerable interest in the show, as three of the leading bantamweights in New England will oppose a trio of New York little men. "Dutch" Brandt of New York will have his troubles, as he will meet the husky Al Shubert, who is one of the classiest men of his weight in this section of the country. Mickey Brown, the clever Malden bantamweight, believes he will prove too fast for Willie Koehler of New York, but the boy from the big city may spring a surprise. The other contest, which will bring together Joe Brooks of New York and Johnny Muncie of Charlestown, should also prove an interesting affair.

Between Rounds

By RINGSIDE

GILBERT GALLANT, THE CHELSEA lightweight, and "Red" Watson of California are in the training for their return ring encounter which will be staged on the Casa Grande Rink, Revere Beach, and both boys are confident that they will win. When Gallant and Watson met in Chelsea the contest was declared a draw after twenty rounds of fighting.

ALEX MCLEAN, MANAGER OF GALLANT, writes from the Golden State that the head of Lange shot the mail Watson afford, as he only had a couple of days' training when engaged in a bout in Salt Lake City. This time Gallant has had a good rest and should win, weighing 140 pounds, which gave him plenty of room to work off on the mat and in the gymnasium.

WATSON EARNED A DRAW IN THE LAST bout he fought Gallant in the fisticuffs West after the Chelsea boy had piled up a lot of points, and he ought to be box on the defensive for the balance of the bout. The boys will box at 135 pounds, ringside, but it is for them to make the weight at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

JACK BLACKBURN, THE FORMER NEgro wizard, who conducted his training quarters at the Lenox Club, Boston, when Joe Gans was training for many of his battles, has been matched to box a ten-round bout with Joe Lynch, the colored boy of a special show to take place at the National A. C. of Philadelphia on Wednesday, May 20.

TWO OFFERS HAVE ALREADY BEEN made for the Gotham-Willard battle at Jersey battle. Billy Gibson is willing to give Smith a guarantee of $15,000 to box Willard at the Stadium A. C., while John Weissmantel of the Broadway Sporting Club of Buffalo has offered Smith a guarantee of $4,000. Dan Morgan is willing to give Smith $5,000 if he can get the bout the club manager that secures the bout.

CHAMPION JOHNNY COULON, WHO IS to defend his title against Kid Williams at Baltimore in a twenty-round bout at Tacoma, Cal., on the night of July 4, is training hard for the fray. He will soon begin boxing with sparring partners. He is accompanied in Harry Tuthes, who will act as his sparring partner.

JACK DOUGHERTY, MANAGER OF AL McCoy, the middleweight champion, who was offered a guarantee of $15,000 by Tex Rickard for McCoy to box Billy Murray, the California middleweight, in San Francisco, has decided to insisting on receiving $15,000 for his end, now comes forward and makes another offer of $10,000 to let Murray in a ten-round bout at the Stadium A. C., Philadelphia, on Wednesday, May 14. Dougherty is anxious to get the match after Manager Billy Gibson promised to give his other fighters in contests at future shows of the club.

ACCORDING TO A LETTER JUST RE-ceived Danny Morgan from his Manager, who is still in Paris, he says that he was Carpentier at Olympia, London, on May 22, for $60,000 for his end to fight "Gunboat" Smith in London on June 5. Carpentier is willing to give Carpentier of England is willing to give Carpentier $15,000, but Carpentier is still holding out for the above sum.

"YOUNG" JACK O'BRIEN OF PHILADELphia, who boxed the heavyweights under weight a year ago, but showed to much advantage against Jack Dempsey, Fred Fulton and Jess Willard, is especially pleased with the showing made by his brother, and Morgan has sent him to Stamford, Ct., to get into condition.

AD WOLGAST RECEIVED $3,000 FOR getting defeated by Johnny Dundee, the crack Scottish featherweight, in their bout at Madison Square Garden. The gross receipts amounted to $9,000. Tillman got close to $3,000. The best boxing was shown by Martin Morris and Harlem Wm. Jones $2,817. Mandot received $863 and McCoy $803.

EDDIE MCGOORTY EVIDENTLY DOESN'T care for any of Jimmy Clabby's scalps. Reports from Australia state that McGoorty is matched to take for this scalper shortly. Clabby appeared in Australia the other day and is looking for a way to arrange a bout with McGoorty. If he can't get McGoorty, Rimmer will probably step in for a few lesser bouts.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

TALK about getting off to a poor start, whatdoyouknow about Walter Johnson? He lost three games, one after the other, and the season is only three weeks old. This is the worst record he has made since he joined the big show several years ago. If some rookie pitcher or even an ordinary first-class twirler had lost three games running in the spring of the year there would hardly have been any comment worth mentioning, but to have the greatest of them all lose three in a row is something to sit up and take notice of.

THEY all have their alibis—great and small. Discussing his misfortune the big Swede says:

"I have known that I was not right for some time past, because I could not get the speed on the ball that I usually have. There is apparently nothing wrong with me. My arm feels as strong as ever, and I am well in every respect, apparently. But I can't get anything on the ball.

"Ten days before the season opened I worked out for ten or fifteen minutes one morning. It did not strain me in the least, and I am sure I had more that day than ever before in my life. I felt that I had rounded into form and told Trainer Martin so, but with perhaps one day I have had nothing since. I know it will come all right in time."

GRIFFITH is somewhat worried over the situation. With Johnson losing games the Washington club doesn't amount to much. It is like a ship without a rudder, an automobile without gasoline, a buggy without a horse.

Ever since the Great Walter lost to the Little Rankin, of the Red Sox, we haven't heard so much about winning the pennant coming from the Washington camp.

THE Old Fox has taken to the hedge and is now predicting that his team will play .500 ball.

Athletics. He says:

"I have a feeling right now that we are going to finish higher than the Athletics. We may not win the pennant, but I feel that we will beat out the Mackmen. The loss of Barry will prove to be a serious blow to Connie Mack, and I think that the Athletics will lose a number of games on his account. Take one man out of an infield that has been working together as long as McInnis, Collins, Baker and Barry have, and it will be hard to get it together again.

"With Barry out I think Mack has something to worry about, for his club is not playing its real game, and the Mackmen have some hard battles coming. They are climbing up a bit in the race now, but watch them when they meet some of the Western clubs. I think that Detroit and Chicago will give them a pretty tough time of it."

IT is being whispered in National League circles that the Chicago National League team is dropping money by the carload as a result of the conflicting games on home grounds with the Whales. The fans of Chicago will not be convinced that Charles Webb Murphy, the former trouble maker in the National League camp, is not yet financially interested in the Cubs. They regard Charles H. Thomas, who was made president of the club by owner Charles P. Taft, as merely a figurehead. As Thomas was a protege of Murphy's the Chicago fans will not stand for him.

THE syndicate of Chicago men headed by John T. Connery, who offered Taft $770,000 for the Chicago Nationals only to learn that Taft would not take a cent less than $810,000, are hugging themselves over the turn of affairs. If present conditions continue, it is believed that Taft will be extremely lucky if he can induce the syndicate to take the club off his hands for as much as $400,000.

THE seven other National League club owners realize that they are bound up very financially when their clubs visit Chicago this year, but they are disposed to make the best of it as it may induce Taft to get out of the league. If truth were known, Taft is no better liked by his associates than Murphy was.

ROGER BRESNAHAN will find himself in trouble if he makes good his threat to jump to the St. Louis Federals. This is the information put out by those close to the powers in organized baseball. Bresnahan signed a straightaway contract for two years at an annual salary of $10,000 with the Cubs in 1913. He was paid in full last year and has accepted money on this year's term of the contract.

Organized baseball is ready to take Bresnahan and Otto Stifel, the St. Louis Fed. promoter, into court as a moment's notice if the fat catcher jumps the traces. The case is said to be identical with that of Chief Johnson of the Reds, who hopped to the Kansas City Feds and was enjoined by a United States Court two days later.

IT is reported from Pittsburgh that Doc Gessler's job hangs by a mighty slim thread. Doc is manager of the Pittsburgh Feds, and will be remembered as the man that Stallings drove out of Macon last Spring with a threat to put him in jail if he tampered with any of his players. Doc beat it promptly.

DOC was called back to Pittsburgh from Chicago the other day, ostensibly to discuss with President Gwinner the procuring of new players for the infielders of the Federal organization. But when the directors of the club met Doc was not invited to take part in the discussion. He cooled his heels outside the room and later said that he didn't know whether he was fired or suspended. Doc said in his own defence:

"I told the president of the club before going West that we could not win a game with the team as at present constituted, and they told me to go ahead and get new men and said they would pay the price. But when I had the man at hand they refused to pay the money. The team needs two new infielders, another catcher, two outfielders and three good pitchers; then it might win a few games."

DOC doesn't want much, does he?

WORCESTER, May 6.—Littlefields of Boston and the combination team of Adams Square-Bowlaway of Somerville are leading teams in the competition of the National Duck and Candlepin Congress here.

The visitors did not break any records, but several finished well up in the prize list.

Adams Square-Bowlaway in the five-men candlepin class rolled 1,570, tieling Revere.

In the three-men candlepin division Pine, McConville and Felton rolled an even 1,000, which stands second in that class.

Currie, Delano and Pine in the three-men duck division cracked 395, which stands second in that money section.

The only other notable score was the single of Boyle of this city in the individual class. He hit 363, a new record for the present tournament.

Adams Square got into the two-men candlepin class, when McConville and Felton rolled 674. Felton was the strong man with 353.

George McConville rolled the 30-ball candle and duck competitions and tied the high scores in both events. Hedberg's records were 36 for candles and 27 for ducks.

Boxing Results.

At New York—Mike Gibbons of St. Paul outpointed Johnny Howard of Bayonne, N. J., in every round but the third in their ten-round match in Brooklyn. The action was rapid and Howard was game, but outclassed. Gibbons showed all of his wares and pulled every trick he was capable of, punched hard and did not lose, but he was unable to do more than slightly damage Howard's face.

At Paris—Joe Borrell, a middleweight boxer of Philadelphia easily defeated Marcel Moreau, French middleweight, the referee stopping the fight in the eight round of a scheduled twenty-round bout.

At Somersworth, N. H.—Bill McGinnis, the Nova Scotia boxer, and Fred Lapointe of Somersworth boxed eight rounds to a draw before 350 fans at Colonial Hall. A six-round draw was fought between Spike Regan of Dover and Young Govien of Somersworth and one of four rounds between Young McAdam of Dover and Kid Banks of Somersworth.

* * *

At New York—Charley Weinert of Newark defeated Jack Murphy of Ireland in ten fast rounds at Brown's Gym before a big crowd. In the concluding session the Newark fighter sent his adversary to the floor.

GEORGE E. PHAIR SAYS:

DIPLOMACY.

A fighter in the prize ring had his forearm all but out,
He could have stopped the battle
with a well directed clout.
He measured off the distance and he set himself to hit;
The frantic crowd was waiting for the impact of his mitt.
But drawing back his good right arm, he seemed to hesitate,
"O, let us pause a while," he said,
"and we shall mediate."

A football player grabbed the ball and started for the goal;
Before him was an open field without a single soul.
Behind him marked heavy men who ran with heavy feet,
But they were panting all in vain,
for he was young and fleet,
And as he neared the posts of white
he checked his flying gait,
"It is diplomacy," he said, "to pause and mediate."

The score was even-stephen and the crowd was in suspense;
A baseball player hit the ball against the right field fence.
It was an easy homer, and the crowd was howling mad,
And yet the boy who hit it was a diplomatic lad.
He sped around the bases, but refused to cross the plate,
"It is the custom now," he said,
"to stop and mediate."

If Dickcraes were alive today he would not have any trouble in finding an honest man. Bob Hedges was offered $275,000 for his ball club and refused to take advantage of it.

We don't know who it was that offered $375,000 for the Browns, but we know that he is not well versed in baseball supe.

Possibly the Braves and Sox would be better off if they could only mediate a few games.

Possibly there is method in the madness of the Red Sox. They may be saving their hits for their next training series.

It were well to remember the names of those Iowa collegians who played nine innings without getting a hit. You may see some of them later in Boston uniforms.

SCHOOL LEADERS CRASH IN BIG GAMES

Medford High has an excellent chance to step into the top position in Suburban League standing today by defeating Melrose High at Melrose. By virtue of the protested game between Somerville and Medford, which has been ordered played over by the games committee, Medford is now tied with Somerville for the lead with two games won and one game lost.

Melrose team will put up a tough fight, however, as a win will put them up in second place. Somerville High has no league game scheduled for this afternoon.

Coach Gene Sullivan of the Melrose team will send his first string pitcher, Ross, after the game today, and if he shows anything like usual form he should pitch his team to a victory.

Ross has been performing in fine style this season, and his win over Everett High is a fair sample of his ability.

MALDEN AND EVERETT CLASH.

It is true that Ross was defeated by Somerville High, but the day previous he had pitched a hard game against Everett. Donnellan will probably pitch for Medford.

Malden and Everett will clash for the second time this season in a league contest at Everett, and a great amount of interest is attached to this game.

Malden was the winner in the first game and will battle its hardest today in order to win again from Cleo O'Donnell's charges.

Flanders, who pitched his team to victory the last time, is in the best of shape and is confident of another victory.

Lasky and Durant are both ready to go on the mound for the Everett, and Coach O'Donnell will look both over carefully before selecting the man to twirl.

OTHER GAMES ON TODAY.

Every member of the team is anxious to secure revenge, and the game should be one of the hardest fought of the season.

The Exeter Academy-Dean Academy game at Exeter will be watched with great interest. Last year the Franklin Academy boys trounced Exeter, and the New Hampshire boys have not forgotten it and are out to give the Dean team a bad beating.

The Boston Latin team will go to Southboro today to battle the St. Mark's team, and the Southboro boys should come out the easy winners. The Latin School team has not been playing good ball this season, but the shift made may add strength to the nine.

GRAND SERIES OF RACES FOR QUINCY CUP

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

The series of races for the Quincy Cup, one of the best yachting trophies in NewEngland, will this Summer be a corker.

The cup, won last year by the Boston Yacht Club, will be defended by that club and the races will be sailed off Marblehead in a series commencing July 12.

The Boston Club has received challenges from the following clubs: Corinthian and Eastern of Marblehead; Manchester, Mosquito Fleet and South Boston of South Boston; Savin Hill and Cohasset.

Although no yachts have yet been named it looks like sonder boats in every instance with possibly the famous old Harpoon twice a winner of the cup, representing the Cohasset Club.

For the first time in the history of the Quincy cup races, Charles Francis Adams, 2d, will not figure in the races this Summer as he is busily engaged in the handling of the Yankee cup defender Resolute.

The Quincy Club does not challenge this year, one of the very few times in the history of the cup races that this South Shore club has not figured in the races.

BRAVES' GAME OFF; MEN START FOR THE WEST

Although the sun came out at 11 o'clock this morning, the South End grounds were too wet for baseball and the game was called off. The Braves and Phillies immediately packed up to start West.

Manager Stallings decided to take twenty-three men along. But the stay-at-homes will join the team at Cincinnati. The Phillies, who depart with the Bostonians, will entertain the Brooklyn Dodgers at Philadelphia in a series beginning tomorrow.

The Braves will not return home until June 5.

PLAY GIANTS FIRST.

On this trip the Braves will first visit New York for four games. Then they go to Pittsburgh for one game, then to Cincinnati for four, returning to the Smoky City for three more battles with the Pirates. Journeying onward, Captain Johnny Evers and his teammates will strike Chicago, the Crab's old stamping ground, on May 21, and there they will play four games, after which they bust it to St. Louis, the place that no ball player likens to a sob. Finishing a four-game series there, the Braves take the rattler to Philadelphia. Arriving there May 29, they will begin a three-game series (including two on Memorial Day). Brooklyn comes next on the schedule for three days and then the much-travelled Braves will return home. Thus they will have covered many hundreds of miles and will have visited every one of the National League cities on the trip.

BETTER WEATHER MAY HELP.

It is believed that our boys will find themselves on the road and that when they return on June 5 they will be in shape to settle down and show us what they have in the way of a winning combination. Last season Stallings' band was a strong road aggregation, doing better away from home than they did on the home yard. Doubtless there will be plenty of warm days so that pitchers like Perdue, who are complaining of cold weather, will have no alibis in spring on the hopeful manager.

But, in any case, the fans hope and pray that there will be a little more of the clouting that characterized Monday's game at the South End ground. If the Braves have at last struck their gait with the stick they will win a lot of games from now on.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

IF A RECORD OF INFIELD HITS WAS kept Jake Daubert would come very close to leading the batting of both major leagues.

THE SEATTLE IS DOING ALMOST AS well to keep the Brooklyn Federals in the cellar as he did to keep the Phillies in fourth place in a year ago.

THE CHICAGO WHITE SOX GOT AWAY like a team of champions but it has shown no much speed coming as they did while going in the other direction.

FROM NEW LONDON COMES THE REPORT that Infielder Merton J. Faatz, owner of the Eagles, has stolen bases in that city, one in each of the last seven ball parks visited by that team.

IT IS A LONG TIME BETWEEN HOME runs into left field between 2 of ordinary Park, St. Louis. Clarence Walker's recent hit into this section was the first to do so in several years.

MARTIN O'BRIEN NOW LOOKS LIKE ONE of the best college pitchers of the year. His record of striking three men out in nine visits is likely to stand for the season even if he fails to keep up his whirling stuff.

MIKE DONLIN HAS FINALLY DISCOVered a batting cure, though Mike's first healthy run a bit early. It may not be real cure, but that he is operating terms will a batting average Donlin ought to be near up to the Ty Cobb and Hugh Jennings class. Any other society would have strings to him.

THREE TRIPLE PLAYS AND ONE TRIPLE steal have already been made in the Major leagues and the season is only about three weeks old. It looks like a big year for record makers.

BALTIMORE'S INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE team is the best club that has represented the Monumental City since the days of Matthews, Reitz, Heltz, Keefer, Bultman and others, on the occasion of President Ebbets of the Brooklyn club.

CY PIER'S FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF THE American League must be that Washington has the hardest hitting team in the organization. The Senators nicked Cy for five hits, one being a home run, in the one inning which marked his 1914 debut.

BATTICKEY—PARODY OF HAVERHILL, touted as a catcher for the Pawtuckets of the Colonial League, has reported for duty.

RED SOX GAME TODAY LIKELY TO GET A JOLT

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 6—Weather permitting, the Red Sox and Athletics will play their first game of the present series here this afternoon and try to make it the odd game. Heavy clouds did not hold out much hope of a game, but an occasional glimpse of the sun kept away the rain.

Manager Carrigan grunted as he looked out the hotel window this morning and then remarked that he would pitch Ray Collins unless he changed his mind. That was about all the Red Sox leader would say except that he had a bunch of good catchers and might use any one of them.

Philadelphians cannot understand why Boston is not doing better this season. The outfield certainly is equal to, if not better than any other in the league; the pitchers are strong, the catchers cannot be beaten and yet the team cannot strike its gait.

The opinion here is that when the Sox get going they will be the hardest team in the league for the Athletics to beat.

Connie Mack said this morning that he would pitch Pennock, who is just recovering from a siege of boils, and that Schang would catch.

CHAPTER VI.

What Happened on Board the Swan

ONE morning when the weather was getting warm and the birds were singing as if there never had been such a thing as Winter, a note was brought to Madame Daubrais in the garden, which seemed to give her a great deal of satisfaction. Little Arthur had steadily improved ever since that day when she had made a vow to see him grow up strong and well. The disease which had so baffled the physicians had been steadily forced back, and it began to look very much as if Arthur would grow to be a strong man and frustrate Daubrais' scheme, after all.

"Arthur," she said delightedly to her little son, who was lying back in a large deck chair near her, "Captain Marshall writes that we can go on board the Swan any time now, dear, and I'm sure that when we return after such a lovely trip you will be playing around the garden like any other little boy.

Arthur smiled faintly, and Madame Daubrais left him a moment later to arrange for some things to be packed. There was no need of waiting even a day to go on board, she thought to herself; the sooner the treatment began the better. They would leave for the river instantly.

In the meantime Remi had almost reached the end of his rope. His food was gone and he had had nothing to eat for over a day. The dogs frisked about him, dumbly asking why he didn't give them something to eat, and he was so wornout himself that he could hardly drag himself along the river edge. Beppo, who was not as hungry as the others, wanted to play, and it was this piece of playfulness that Arthur saw from the deck of the Swan as the small boat sailed slowly down the river. He had been playing disconsolately with the field glasses, and, leveling them on the bank had suddenly perceived a sight which interested him very much.

"Oh, look, mother," he said excitedly. "Look at that little boy with the monkey and the trick dogs. He isn't any bigger than I am. Don't you think he would come on board and do some of his tricks for me if you asked him?"

Lucile was only too glad to have Arthur interested in anything, and she immediately called one of the servants and asked him to steer the boat and see if the little boy on the bank would come on board for a while.

Remi was somewhat surprised as he saw the pretty boat turn to shore, and when he was asked by the man who stepped on the bank if he would go on board for a while to amuse a little sick boy, he forgot his own troubles and eagerly assented.

AN AMUSING SIGHT

Lucile greeted him kindly and Arthur was frankly delighted at the antics of the dogs and the monkey, who performed for him as if they had been trained for such a thing always. But Remi, whose weakness was rapidly getting the better of him, began to get very white, and suddenly as Arthur asked him a question about one of the dogs, everything turned very black around him and he fell back against Lucile, who was standing directly behind him and who caught him before he could fall.

"I believe he is hungry," she said to Arthur. "Bring some food here immediately," she called to one of the maids who had paused in the backgrounds to watch the animals perform.

"Are you hungry, you poor little boy?" she asked, tenderly, as some of the color began to force its way back into Remi's white face. And his pitiful nod of assent brought the tears to her eyes. At the sight of the food that was put before him a second later his eyes almost popped out of his head. He ate ravenously, and between mouthfuls dropped choice morsels into the wide-open mouths of his dumb friends who sat upon their haunches ready for anything he might give them.

After Remi had finished he sat back in the chair and smiled a weak little smile of content. Arthur was enchanted with this new little playfellow and his pets. He had never seen anything like the little scene that had just been enacted before him in all his short, uneventful life.

"Oh, mother, do say that the little boy may stay with us," he begged, entreatingly. "There's such little cabin next to mine that he could use, and we could have such fun together. Please don't say no."

Lucile looked at Remi to see how he was taking this proposition. He was politely looking the other way, but there was an expression of strained interest about the small face that made the mother smile even while the tears were close to her eyes. Perhaps her own little boy was in just such a position somewhere in the big cruel world. Long ago she had given up ever hearing from her stolen baby, and she had tried not to think about him, for useless grieving brought no good to anyone, and there was Arthur to constantly look out for and make happy.

"Would you like to stay with us?" she said, taking one of Remi's dirty little hands in her own. "Perhaps you and my little boy would be able to have some very good times together if you cared to stay."

"Oh, yes!" said Remi, eagerly; "there is no place in the world where I can go. And if you could tell Vitali"—— He paused. Perhaps he ought not to tell his new friend about Vitali being in prison.

"Yes," said Lucile, encouragingly. "And who is Vitali? Of course we must write to him. Think how he would worry about you if we took you off and he couldn't find you."

HIS STORY

And then the whole story came out. How they had performed in Paris without a license and how Vitali had been taken off to prison and he had been left alone in charge of the animals. How he had slept out doors in the hay fields and how his food supply had finally given out. Mme. Daubrais was strangely sympathetic as she listened to the sad little story. There was something about this child that touched the deeper feelings of her heart. She experienced a strange feeling of relief that he was to remain on board the Swan where she could look after him for the present, and she decided to notify Vitali immediately and to send a small sum of money in the note so that he would be able to meet the child when he was released. How strange that his name should be Remi! she thought to herself. And for the second time that day she wondered at the strange attachment that had sprung up in her heart for the homeless little waif.

The Waif and the Street Musician

What She Meant

Amelia was all sweet, nice and nervous, and she said to her sweetheart:

"You have been so old a friend, I want to tell you something. I am," she blushed, "I am going to be married."

"What," he cried, hoarsely. "Before you go further, hear me. I must say it, though I have no right now, but I will have less right later. I love you; I adore you; I have loved you since we were children together. I do not see how I can live and see you the wife of another. But at least you will know that I have loved you all these years, and when you hear the wind sigh ever my distant grave—or course, that is nonsense"——

"Don't take on so, John Henry," she said softly. "I'm going to marry—you!"

Then the young man fainted, and, as she bent over him, a determined little line showed about her mouth, and she muttered: "I had to do something to bring him to it."

Thoughtful Hubby

"How sweet of you to remember our wedding day, lovey," said the wife, as she hoare of the surprise theatre party outing on the morning of her wedding anniversary.

All smiles and happy anticipations, she arrived at the theatre, hoping that hubby would be in a pleasant mood.

"Seats all right, old girl?" he asked, when they were comfortably settled.

"Quite, dear."

"Don't feel any draught, do you?" he inquired.

"Not a breath!" she answered sweetly.

"Got a good view? No big hats or anything in front of you?" came the further inquiry.

"Nothing. I'm perfectly comfortable, dear," she answered, wondering at her lord and master's attentiveness.

"Well, then, change seats with me, old lady!" came the crushing answer.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I JUST got through reading a old romantic novel, George," said the Manicure Lady, "and I would like to have been a man in them days, and a fighter. There was always something kind of romantic in me anyhow, and I always took a lot more interest reading about one of them knights stabbing some awful bum with a sword than I can take in reading about a modern cannon that can shoot sixteen miles and blow up a ship. There ain't no class to your wholesale killing, but there is something grand for a girl of my sentimental nature to think of a slim, tall gent whose every move is like light, standing up there with his sword and making circles of light and flame around his cunning component."

"I would want none of them fancy swordsmen to stick me through the gizzard," declared the Head Barber.

"Of course you wouldn't," said the Manicure Lady. "That is because you have been slathering so long that the instincts of rivalry is dead in you. Any time I see one of them old plays that has a sword duel in it I want to go every night the rest of the week and see it over. I wish you would take the time to read this romantic novel, George. It is full of thrills from the first chapter to the end. It tells all about this Richard the Lion Hearted, and what a wonderful hand he was for slashing ugents with his great sword."

"It would be foolish to start in these days fighting with a sword anyhow," said the Head Barber. "One little gunman full of cocaine could shoot this Richard the Lion Hearted and three of his pals without no chance of a comeback. I guess all that swords is good for now is to hang up crosswise in somebody's den."

"But it ought not to be that way," insisted the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred is just the same as I am about that. He is all the time telling about the romantic novel that he is going to write. He has a poem all ready, but he ain't wrote none of the novel yet to go around it. This is how part of them poetic lines goes, George, all that I can remember:

"I swing the sword at serf and lord,
My life I hold quite cheaply.
Each foe I meet must be discreet
Or else get cut quite deeply.
For here and there and everywhere
My sword cannot be beaten,
And it will dart through a foeman's heart
Or the lunch which he has eaten.

"The sword is that great weapon which Young Ivanhoe was good at.
Each dale and hill where he showed skill
In dreams I oft have stood at.
I love the days of sword and spear,
The days of racks and hangmen,
And that is why, while I am here,
I'll never join no gangmen."

"I don't know," declared the Head Barber. "I don't think it is any worse to be a gangman than to write that kind of poetry."

Beatrice Fairfax Writes on

Along Came Joy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

MANY decades ago mischievious sculptors and artists made, of marble and oils, Niobes dissolved in their own tears, so wistfully beautiful, so attractive in their pathos that weeping became quite the fashion and cry-babies became quite the rage.

No one remembered in eulogising these emotional creatures that grief is as disfiguring as a loathesome disease. The nose becomes red, the eyes swollen and as devoid of intelligent expression as a pair of oysters. The hair is disheveled and a general air of untidiness accompanies what women call a "good cry," though why they should call it "good" no one knows, for the weeper doesn't look good and no good is accomplished by such an outburst.

LOOK AT YOURSELF

The next time you have indulged in such an exhibition, look at yourself in the mirror, with a good strong light on your face. Then ask yourself frankly if you are in condition to win what you are crying for. If it is a lost love (which seems to be the cause of all the overflows when the weeper is between the ages of fifteen and thirty), would your appearance win back to you even a lover who is blind?

If you have lost a position, which is a serious matter these days, will your face so saturated with tears it looks like a sponge, have any influence on the next man to whom you apply for a position?

Men, who are the cause of ninety per cent. of the tears women shed, are the quickest to resent the sight of a tear-stained face. They don't want to be "bothered" with any appeals to their sympathies; if there is any one to be patted on the back with kind words of sympathy and encouragement, they want to furnish the backs.

The tear is bound to lose; it is the laugh that wins.

WHAT IT IS

"Pete served me meanly, but I looked at her and laughed
That none might know how bitter was the cup I quaffed.'
Along came Joy and paused beside me where I sat,
Saying, 'I came to see what you were laughing at.'"

Laughter, learned men will tell you, begins in the lungs and diaphragm, and as it comes to the surface it sets the liver, the stomach and other organs into a jelly-like vibration that is good for them. It descends to the stomach and shakes it, hurrying the process of digestion, accelerates the respiration and gives warmth and glow to the entire system. It brightens the eyes, increases perspiration, expands the chest, forces poisoned air from the least used lung cells and restores health.

Tears have the reverse effect on the one who weeps, and affect the spirits and health of the entire family. Tears are less a sign of a tender nature and more a proof of a selfish one.

Laugh, and along will come Joy to find what you are laughing at.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

FIREMEN assisting seventeen women to escape from the nineteenth story of a burning building; the elopement of the blonde next door with her father's chauffeur; a purple wig worn in the Amen corner at prayer meeting; a meeting of women called to tell all the disagreeable traits of character found only in the male human; any or all of these haven't as moving effect on a woman's mind as the sight of the top of her husband's head above his evening paper.

She may have talked all day, but this little domestic tragedy she will not talked out. She may have nothing to say, but the sight of her husband peacefully engrossed in his paper incites her to at least make the effort.

It is inspiration that makes the most silent woman voluble. As all men will testify.

Lysander John Appleton heard his wife's voice as one hears the voice of a fly on the outside of the screen door. He knew she was talking, but read column after column with deep gratitude that he had learned to concentrate his mind on his reading, and was not disturbed.

Mrs. Appleton's monologue was at first devoted to a letter she had received that day from a kin, and though she sighed when repeating that Cousin John had been compelled to mortgage his farm, and grew indignant in relating the arrival of the ninth baby at Cousin Mary's, and jumped from her kin to the newest neighborhood scandal, Lysander John heard her not.

She had read that day of a man of eighty who had become a father, and didn't he think the man ought to be ashamed of himself, and Lysander John had told her a week ago to stay home; he had asked the plumber to come up and wanted her to be there, and the plumber hadn't come yet and did Lysander John think she was going to stay home the rest of her life waiting for a plumber, and Daysey Mayme had a new beau, and the parlor needed papering; every girl ought to have a pretty parlor in which to receive her callers, and she had washed her hair that day, and it is just coming out in handfuls, and the next president had such a sympathetic way. And Lysander John had heard never a word.

"I paid forty dollars for my new Spring hat," she went on, "and Daysey Mayme's cost sixty, and the milliner was cheap."

"What's that?" thundered Lysander John, throwing his paper to the floor and stamping on it. "One hundred dollars for hats! !!!!!!!!!!, and the times were so!!!!!!!!!

CLEAN UP YOUR FRONT LAWN AND HELP CAMPAIGN

Have your front lawn clean by tonight.

Today is Front Yard Day in the week of the "clean-up and paint-up" campaign.

Tomorrow will be "paint-up day." Friday will be fly-prevention day, when special care will be taken to cover up all garbage and to treat stagnant water with oil to prevent the breeding of mosquitoes.

Children of the North End are scheduled to parade today through the streets of that district, if the weather is favorable; if not, there will be a mass meeting in the North Bennet street branch of the Public Library, where there will be a short special direction of the civic service House, will show pictures of the clean-up campaign, and Miss Edith Guerrier, custodian of the library, and Miss Alice F. Vanton, in charge of the Civic Service House, will speak.

Commissioner Louis E. Kinnie has announced that he will take measures to remove boilers, which the public waste department usually refuses to handle, as it has no way of disposing of them. People of the West and North End districts last evening were busy getting their discarded boilers out on the sidewalks, where they will be taken on Friday.

Saturday will be children's day, and brigades of school children, armed with sharpened sticks, will scour the streets and pick up all refuse found. For the benefit of foreign residents in the city circulars in five languages have been printed and distributed among the people of the North and West Ends.

Simmons College girls, under the direction of Miss J. A. Chester, had planned to have the vacant lots in the Fenway disfigurement cleaned up Tuesday, and with funds raised for the purpose had engaged a group of workmen. Owners of lots had been solicited to have the property cleared of rubbish, or to contribute to the fund, and Miss Chester reported that they had responded to a man. It is planned to have this work done as soon as the weather is fair and the ground dry.

Campaign Manager Whitman told the Citizen that he intends to present each of them with little tokens at the end of the week in reward for their services during the clean-up campaign.

Greet With All Honor Our Vera Cruz Dead

On her way from Vera Cruz to New York, carrying the bodies of the seventeen sailors and marines who gave up their lives for the honor of their country, is the cruiser Montana. Never was greater honor accorded a nation's dead than that which marked her sailing from Vera Cruz.

As the cruiser, with her flag at half mast, sailed out to sea she passed between two lines of warships, their flags half masted and their complement of men drawn up to pay a last silent tribute to the heroes of Vera Cruz.

Not only did the ships of our own country pay homage, but those of all nations in the harbor became mourners at an international funeral.

On shore Old Glory remained at half mast until the Montana was no longer upon the horizon. If there were tear-dimmed eyes they were caused by pride and the patriotism of the men in the fleet who saw their comrades going HOME.

The home tribute to the memory of these heroes should be all that a country, a State and a municipality can make it.

The Government has acted promptly. The warships that remain in Atlantic waters will meet and escort the Montana and her dead to the Battery at New York.

Sailors, marines and the regular army will act as an escort to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where there will be a memorial service. And President Wilson, it is announced, probably will be present.

In this tribute to the memory of the men whose lives were given for the honor of the flag that shelters us all, neither Massachusetts nor New York State or New York City must be found lacking.

They were Jew and Gentile, Protestant and Catholic, native and foreign born—but Americans all, with but one life to give, and that they laid upon the altar of their country.

Youths for the most part, their part in history of their country is a lesson in patriotism for the American boy.

Already the Government has paved the way by suggesting that the naval officers communicate with the local officials as to the funeral procession.

The AMERICAN urges upon Boston and State officials in the few short days that remain before the Montana reaches port that they act promptly; that the guard of honor detailed by the Government be added to; that the veteran societies and the patriotic organizations take their places in the long, silent procession.

Massachusetts must pay its tribute not only to Corporal Haggerty but to all those who died for the flag.

New Laws Needless; Enforce the Old

The administration and its spokesmen seem needlessly excited over the fact that the new trust legislation provides for the criminal liability of violators of the law.

A call is made upon the country to stand and admire this marvelous evidence of the determination of the Wilson Administration to crush the trusts—funny, isn't it, with McReynolds entrusted with the job?

But so far as the provision for the criminal liability of offenders is concerned, the old law is quite as good as the new. It is amply sufficient if there ever comes into power an administration which will enforce the law. The present administration seems to find more pleasure and profit in making new laws than enforcing those now in effect. Indeed, it does not even enforce laws of its own making, as witness the refusal of McReynolds and McAdoo to permit the enforcement of the 5% preferential in duties on goods imported in American bottoms.

The Democratic platform, which President Wilson is fond of quoting and equally fond of repudiating, declares, it is true, for "additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States." That legislation the President has sought to supply by the trust bill now before the House. But no legislation, though as severe and relentless as the laws of Draco, will make it impossible for private monopoly to exist in the United States unless it is enforced.

The first few lines of the plank of which the President observes the last lines read:

> A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. WE, THEREFORE, FAVOR THE VIGOROUS ENFORCEMENT OF THE CRIMINAL LAW AGAINST GUILTY TRUST MAGNATES.

This part of the platform declaration the administration has ignored in fact, though not confessedly. What "guilty trust magnate" has suffered the penalties of the criminal law; what one even has had the criminal law ever invoked against him? After fourteen months of power, power that he has employed in sufficiently autocratic form when it so pleased him, President Wilson has done nothing to respond to this demand of his party.

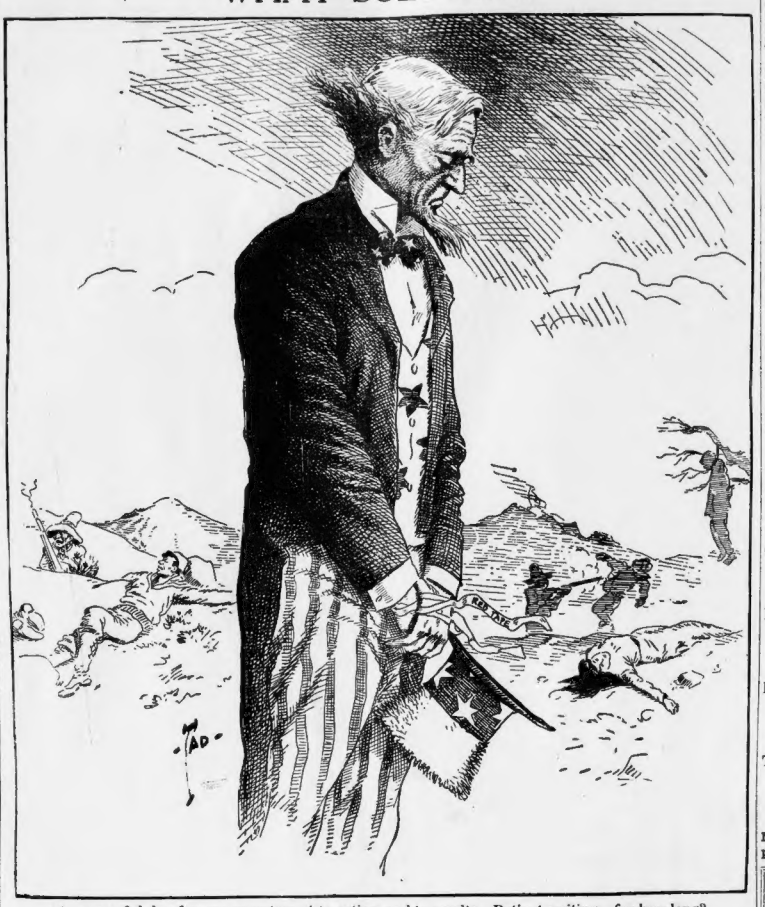
The enforcement of the penalties prescribed for personal guilt is the thing farthest removed from the mind of this administration.

Consider the paltering and tender treatment of the organized Wall Street banditti who plundered the New Haven Railroad and reduced to beggary thousands of families and dependent persons in New England. Not a step has been taken against them; not an indictment found. The Attorney-General has been complaisance itself, the Interstate Commerce Commission has been held inactive to such a point that its counsel, Joseph W. Folk, in the past something of a law enforcer himself, is moved to personal, though unofficial, complaint.

The country can sympathize with Folk. A great reputation, built upon vigorous and impartial enforcement of the law in his Missouri days as prosecuting attorney and Governor, will speedily waste away in the service of an administration that winks at trust criminals.

The House, accustomed now to take orders from the White House, will probably debate the trust bills only perfunctorily. It is just as well. With an administration refusing to enforce existing criminal laws against millionaire offenders, the form of the new law is immaterial.

WHAT SOLUTION?



A sorrowful day for one accustomed to action and to results. Patient waiting—for how long?

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER LIX.

FOR a week Caryl Marvin enjoyed the freedom from sisterly surveillance resulting from her story of her intimacy with Dora Redfield and her brother. Twice she went to the theatre with Hadley, returning late at night to find Julia awake and sympathetically eager to listen to the girl's account of her happy evening.

The older girl did not know, however, that her sister spent every afternoon in the company of her new admirer. Caryl was aware that Ben Hadley's dominion over her increased daily, but she did not resist his influence. She enjoyed too much the pleasures the man's money supplied, and the specious compliments he poured into her eager ears, to wish to break away from him.

Reassured by the remembrance that Delaine had vouched for the good character of John Redfield, Julia uttered no actual protest against her little sister's numerous engagements. Once the older girl suggested timidly that it seemed a little strange that Miss Redfield had never asked to be allowed to meet Caryl's sister, but Caryl answered impatiently:

"Well, really, Julia," she declared, "I can't ask her to come here to meet you, can I? And I don't see how I can get her to invite you to go to any place with us unless she thinks herself of doing so. So don't blame me, please!" And Julia said no more.

In her working hours Caryl noticed a change in her employer's manner, and was puzzled by it. Delaine looked at her steadily and thoughtfully at times and spoke to her in a way that made her feel uncomfortable and vaguely guilty. The author had been worried by the story Julia had told him of Caryl's new friends, and he was driven to a state of helpless exasperation by the knowledge that his hands were virtually tied—so far as straightening out the tangle was concerned.

To be sure he had sought out Harry Somerdyke, his mind full of a volley of accusations which he intended to hurl at him, but that gentleman had disarmed him completely by professing absolute ignorance of what Caryl was doing. Delaine discreetly withheld from his friend any mention of the Redfields in this connection.

"Hang it all, Kelley," Somerdyke said reproachfully, "you seem to forget that I am not a cad, and that I consider a promise a promise. I have left Miss Caryl Marvin alone ever since our frank talk about her. Besides, you know enough of my affairs to realize that I have no time nor inclination to chase around with a shallow-pated little stenographer. But why you should worry about her beats me. You aren't her guardian, and she's only following in the path that lots of silly girls of her stamp take. Forget it, my boy, and don't try to reform all humanity."

Delaine left him, irritated and chagrined, yet believing that Somerdyke was telling the truth, and relieved that his friend was not implicated in what promised to be a disagreeable affair. Kelley was asking himself the question that Julia had put to her troubled mind days ago—namely, why was Caryl taking such pains to practice deception? What was she doing that demanded a covering of falsehoods?

In the hope of reassuring himself and calming his fears that sorrow threatened the woman he loved, Delaine met Julia Marvin again one evening as she walked home from work and noted with a pang how innocently she chatted of Dora and John Redfield—"your friends" she called them—and of their kindness to her sister.

It was after this interview that a resolution took shape in the author's mind. He spent several hours seated in front of his fireplace, smoking more tobacco than was good for him in coming to a final decision. There was only one way to untangle the problem. He would appeal to her in a kind, brotherly way, and try to make her see that she was not fair to her sister, and she was, perhaps, running into dangers of which she knew nothing.

She might listen to him. If she did not, there was just one thing left to do. He would have to tell Julia the truth. He would antagonize Caryl before he would do this—in fact, would put himself to much inconvenience rather than distress the woman he loved by having her suspect that all was not as it should be with her little sister.

It was late at night when Kelley Lolaine reached this point in his cogitations, and he determined to put his resolutions into effect the following day.

When Caryl Marvin awoke that morning she yawned sleepily. She had made no positive engagement with Hadley for the day or evening, and the prospect depressed her. While she was dressing, however, Mrs. Halloran slipped a letter under her door, and her depression vanished as she read it. It was in Hadley's handwriting, and contained a plea, accompanied by endearing epithets, that she meet him at noon in front of the building in which were Delaine's rooms. The girl giggled as she saw that the letter was signed "Dora Redfield." Ben was so clever!

She warmed over the coffee that Julia had left in the pot, for it was too much trouble to brew fresh, and ate her breakfast in her wrapper. Then she rose with another yawn to complete her toilette. As she was brushing her hair in front of the mirror a scribbled note from Julia caught her eye.

Dear Little Sister," it ran. "I have set the alarm clock at the hour at which you should get up to get to Mr. Delaine's on time. I do not want to wake you when I go out, for you looked so tired last night, and got in so late. I know you must be weary going out so much. Dear, would you mind making no more evening engagements for this week. Your pale cheeks make me anxious each morning. Take care of yourself today, dear little girl. If you would not mind, perhaps you and I can go for a little car ride tonight. JULIA."

"Car ride!" gnifted Caryl contemptuously. "I wonder what she'd say if she knew of the trip I took yesterday with Ben."

She had to hurry to finish her toilette, and she was flushed and very pretty when she reached Delaine's apartment. The author opened the door for her himself. His manner was polite, but he did not smile. He followed her into the study, and stood by the window gazing out while she took off her hat and coat. Then he turned toward her and cleared his throat nervously.

"Ah — Miss Marvin," he said, "there is something I want to speak to you about before we begin our work this morning."

Marrying for Fear of Being an Old Maid—It Is a Crime for a Girl to Wed When She Doesn't Love or Just for the Sake of Being a Mrs.

By DOROTHY DIX

A YOUNG woman, who is earning a good salary with better ones in sight, writes me that her parents consider it a disgrace for a girl to be an old maid, and that they continually urge her to marry anybody she can get in order to be able to write "Mrs." before her name.

The girl does not want to marry unless she can better her condition in life, nor does she wish to marry without love. None of us, however, can shake off the superstitions that are bred in us, and the things we are taught at our mother's knee, and so she wants to know if it is a reflection on a girl and a humiliation to her family for her to be an old maid, and if she had better marry any sort of a stick of a man than to remain single.

No. A thousand times no. The poorest trade that any girl ever makes is when she exchanges a sixty-dollar job for a forty-dollar husband, and nothing on earth can justify such folly except for a woman to be so madly in love she has taken leave of her senses. That any girl should make such a bad bargain when she's not in love and merely for the sake of being married is a piece of idiocy that would be past belief if we didn't see it done so often.

Nobody will deny that a happy marriage is the most blissful state in the world, but there can be no happy marriage in which the woman does not love, admire and respect the man to whom she is married. Nor is there any happiness in a marriage in which the husband is not able to support the home in decent comfort.

For a woman to be married to a man whom she does not love and never spells misery for her. For her to be married to a man who cannot make comfortable living means wretchedness. There is no other slave on earth who works so hard as the wife of a very poor man. The girl who works in factory, or store, or office has her hours of labor determined by law, beyond which the most cruel taskmaster cannot drive her. She has her pay envelope at the end of the week, and, generally speaking, she has no anxieties beyond providing for herself.

The poor wife and mother toils from dawn until far into the night at tasks that are never done. She receives no pay for what she does, and she has her heart continually torn in pieces with anguish over the deprivation her children must suffer, and the fear that the time will come when she will not be able to even give them bread.

Nothing but an overwhelming passion for some man that makes a woman feel that she would rather starve and slave at his side than to ride in automobiles and feast on terrapin and champagne away from him should tempt a girl to give up a good position in the business world to marry a man who is making less than she does. A great love can gild the hardest lot, but without love the sacrifices a poor man's wife must make eat into her very soul, and make her curse the day she was fool enough to marry him.

It is a cruel thing that parents should be willing to jeopardize a daughter's happiness by urging marriage on her, but they do. If the girl is dependent on them it leaves her in a peculiarly helpless position, but when the daughter is a working girl, who earns her own living, she has a perfect right to tell them that as long as they do not have to support her she will do as she pleases in the matter.

We do not stop to consider the significance of the thing morally, but this is the first generation of really virtuous women the world has ever known, because for the first time in the history of the world women have been able to marry for love alone, and not forced to marry for a home, and between the woman who marries just to get one and a man who provides her with food, and raiment, and shelter, and the woman of the street, there is no whit of difference.

A girl can marry well, if she can marry the man of her heart, and the man with whom she can take an upward step in the world, by all means let her enter the holy estate. But to marry when she doesn't love and just any sort of a make-shift of a man just to be marrying, and to keep from being an old maid, is not only a crime, it means the wreck of all her chances in her life.
